

Contents

1. Literature and blogs – two sides of the same coin.....	1
Introduction	1
Theoretical foundations.....	2
Expanding the literary backdrop.....	14
The cross-over to blogs	19
Disposition of study.....	22
2. Stop worrying and start loving shit.....	27
Introducing Wael Abbas	27
Issues that don't get covered in the traditional media.....	27
Inspiring activism	29
Spectacular video clips.....	30
The older literary story	31
The spirit of a rebel revealed	34
Concluding discussion on al-Wā'y al-Misrī	42
3. Blogging for the Brethren.....	45
Introducing Ana Ikhwan	45
Facts & bureaucratic details	45
Quelling the Brotherhood	47
Internal workings of the Brotherhood.....	49
Reform & the literary in Ana Ikhwan	51
The non-literary blog & literature connected	56
Pointing towards the future.....	58
4. For the Arab Nation & the silenced non-human.....	61
Introducing Nawara & the "Popular front for raving"	61
Two female voices in the blogging discourse.....	64
Who's impressed by the Mubarak administration?	65
Speaking up for the silenced non-human.....	68

You're not living a respectable life.....	69
Pan-Arabism in regional & transnational themes	72
Political but with different concerns	74
A liberal, business minded feminist.....	75
Political female bloggers with different concerns.....	80
 5. Late night stories	85
Introducing Ahmed Shokeir	85
Poverty & the failed Mubarak administration.....	86
Challenging norms of decorum & election fraud.....	89
Role models & bad leaders	93
Surveys & popularity rankings	94
The Hero	97
Summarizing Ahmed Shokeir	98
 6. Sinai is where I am.....	101
The Poet Ashraf al-Anany	101
Bedouin life & esprit de corps	103
Blogging for the Bedouins & Sinaites	107
The poet & the desert.....	111
Summarizing Ashraf al-Anany	117
 7. Egyptian blogs & literature & activism	121
Blogs & literature	124
Activism.....	128
Further questions.....	129
Epilogue.....	130
 Appendix.....	135
References.....	135
Other sources	142