

Contents

1. Introduction	page 1
2. The writers and the texts
I. Meditatio mortis : Death as a uniform expression of a theological concept in the Latin writers Othloh of St.Emmeran, Peter Damian, and Lotario di Conti (Innocent III).	10
A. The temporal order: Man and his world
B. The eternal order: The eschatological and historical perspectives	14
C. Stylistic and generic description	19
D. Conclusion	22
II. Projection of the ideal order: Death as a divine determinant for political, social, and economic action in Notker's Memento mori	24
A. The temporal order of the Memento mori : Minne and reht , werlt/mundus	28
B. The eternal order of the Memento mori : Notker's tot and his eschatological perspective	39
C. Form and structure	43
III. Education through fear: Death as an agent of physical decay and spiritual destruction of courtly man and his society in Heinrich of Melk's Von des todes gehuoge	48

II

	Page
A. Death and the temporal order: Wife and Husband, Father and Son.	50
B. Death and the eternal order: Heinrich's historical and eschatological visions.	59
C. Form and structure	63
IV. Victory and defeat: Poetic manipulation and divine sanction of Death in Helinant's Les vers de la Mort	65
A. The temporal order: Estates and conditions of humanity	68
B. The eternal order: Death's attributes and actions	73
C. Form and structure	75
V. Fulfillment of the Word: Death as a progression from historical time into theological infinity in Thibaud de Marly's Les vers	81
A. The temporal order: Man and his estates
B. The eternal order: Thibaud's Death and eschatological and historical perspectives	87
C. Form and structure	92
3. Conclusion	95
4. Notes	99
5. Bibliography	118

APPENDIX: LATIN AND FRENCH TEXTS