

Contents

Preface to the Second English Edition xiii

Contributors xv

1 Motivation and Action: Introduction and Overview 1

J. Heckhausen and H. Heckhausen

1.1 Universal Characteristics of Human Action 1

1.1.1 Control Striving 2

1.1.2 Goal Engagement and Goal Disengagement 2

1.2 Motivation as a Product of Person and Situation 3

1.2.1 Person Factors: Needs and Implicit and Explicit Motives 3

1.2.2 Situation Factors: Intrinsic and Extrinsic Incentives 4

1.2.3 The Interaction of Person and Situation: Subjective Patterns of Incentives 5

1.3 Motivational and Volitional Action Control 6

1.4 Development of Motivation and Motivation of Development: The Dynamic Interaction of Person and Situation Across the Lifespan 8

2 Historical Trends in Motivation Research 10

H. Heckhausen

2.1 Introduction 10

2.2 The Generation of Pioneers 11

2.3 The Psychology of the Will 13

2.4 The Instinct Theory Approach 17

2.5 Personality Theories 20

2.5.1 The Motivation Psychology Approach 22

2.5.2 The Cognitive Psychology Approach 25

2.5.3 The Personality Psychology Approach 27

2.6 Associationist Theories 29

2.6.1 The Learning Psychology Approach 29

2.6.2 The Activation Psychology Approach 33

3 Trait Theories of Motivation 42

D. Scheffer and H. Heckhausen

3.1 From the Nomothetic to the Idiographic 42

3.1.1 Key Issues in Trait Theories of Motivation 42

3.1.2 Definition of a Trait 43

3.2 The Lexical Approach or the “Wisdom of Language” 44

3.2.1 The Five-Factor Model (Big Five) 44

3.2.2 R. B. Cattell’s Trait Theory 47

3.3 Motives as an Expression of Needs 50

3.3.1 Instinct-Based Classification of Motives 50

3.3.2 Person-Environment Relationships 52

3.3.3 Maslow’s Hierarchical Model of Motive Classification 55

3.4 Basic Emotions as a Rudimentary Motivation System 57

3.4.1 The Basic Emotions 58

3.4.2 The Adaptive Value of Emotions 59

3.4.3 Personality Traits as “Congealed” Emotions 60

3.5 Systems Theory Models of Motivation 61

3.5.1 The Zürich Model of Social Motivation 61

3.5.2 Kuhl’s Personality Systems Interaction Theory 64

3.6 Allport’s Idiographic Approach 65

4 Situational Determinants of Behavior 69

J. Beckmann and H. Heckhausen

4.1 The Explanatory Role of the Situation in Motivational Psychology 70

4.2 Need and Drive 70

4.3 Drive Theory 72

4.3.1 Antecedent Conditions of Drive 73

4.3.2 Drive Stimuli 74

4.3.3 Independence of Drive and Habit 74

4.3.4 Energizing Effects of Drive 75

4.3.5 Reinforcement Effects of Drive Reduction 75

4.3.6 The General Nature of Drive 76

4.3.7 Extensions of Drive Theory 77

4.4 Neo-Associationism 79

4.5 Conflict Theory 80

4.5.1 Lewin’s Conflict Theory 80

4.5.2 Miller’s Model of Conflict 82

4.5.3 Applications of the Conflict Model 83

4.6 Activation Theories 85

4.6.1 The Construct of Arousal 85

4.6.2 Arousal Potential and Its Effects	86
4.7 Cognitive Appraisal Theories	88
4.7.1 Emotion as an Outcome of a Cognitive Appraisal	88
4.7.2 Emotion-Triggering Situations	89
4.7.3 Appraisal of Threatening Situations	89
4.7.4 Cognitive Dissonance	91
4.8 Cognitive Appraisal Theories and Motivational Psychology	96
5 Motivation as a Function of Expectancy and Incentive	99
J. Beckmann and H. Heckhausen
5.1 The Emergence of Incentives as Explanatory Concepts	99
5.2 Situational Parameters of Motivation	100
5.2.1 The Incentive Concept	100
5.2.2 The Expectancy Concept	101
5.3 Linking Incentive and Expectancy	101
5.4 Lewin's Field Theory	101
5.4.1 Tolman's Analysis of Goal-Directed Behavior	111
5.4.2 Hull's Learning Theory Conception of Motivation	114
5.4.3 More Recent Developments	116
5.5 Expectancy-Value Theories	120
5.6 Decision Theory	121
5.7 Level of Aspiration and the Theory of Resultant Valence	123
5.7.1 Success Expectancy and Valence	124
5.8 Atkinson's Risk-Taking Model	125
5.9 Rotter's Social Learning Theory	128
5.10 Instrumentality Theory	129
5.10.1 Vroom's Instrumentality Model	131
5.10.2 The Three-Component Model of Valence, Action, and Performance	132
6 Achievement Motivation	137
J. C. Brunstein and H. Heckhausen
6.1 Evolutionary and Ontogenetic Perspectives	138
6.2 Motive Measurement	139
6.2.1 The Thematic Apperception Test (TAT)	139
6.2.2 TAT Measurements of the Achievement Motive	140
6.2.3 Success and Failure Motives	142
6.2.4 TAT Measurements of Hope and Fear	143
6.2.5 Psychometric Properties of the TAT	144
6.2.6 The Consistency Problem from the Perspective of Measurement and Construct Validity	146
6.2.7 Other Techniques for Measuring Achievement-Related Motives	146
6.2.8 Anatomy, Mechanisms, and Measurement of the Achievement Motive	149
6.3 The Achievement Motive and Behavior	150
6.3.1 The Achievement Motive and Individual Performance	150
6.3.2 The Achievement Motive and Historical and Economic Change	152
6.4 The Risk-Taking Model as the Dominant Research Paradigm	154
6.4.1 Motive-Dependent Valence Gradients	155
6.4.2 Choice: Product of Incentive and Expectancy	158
6.4.3 Persistence	163
6.4.4 Performance Outcomes	165
6.5 Achievement Motivation and Self-Evaluation	173
6.5.1 Achievement Motivation as a Self-Reinforcing System	173
6.5.2 The Role of Reference Norms in the Motivation Process	176
6.5.3 Reference-Norm Orientation and Achievement Motivation	177
6.6 The Importance of Achievement Motivation Research for Motivation and Learning	181
7 Social Bonding: Affiliation Motivation and Intimacy Motivation	184
K. Sokolowski and H. Heckhausen
7.1 The Development of Social Bonds	184
7.1.1 The Phylogeny of Social Bonding	185
7.1.2 The Ontogenesis of Social Bonding	185
7.2 Affiliation Motivation	186
7.3 The Two Sides of the Affiliation Motive – Hope and Fear	189
7.3.1 Hope of Affiliation	189
7.3.2 Fear of Rejection	190
7.3.3 Conflicts Between Hope and Fear in Affiliative Situations	191
7.4 Measuring the Affiliation Motive and Its Behavioral Correlates	192
7.4.1 The Thematic Apperception Test (TAT)	192
7.4.2 Questionnaire Measures	195
7.4.3 The Grid Technique	196
7.5 Intimacy Motivation	198
7.5.1 Measuring the Intimacy Motive	198
7.5.2 The Intimacy Motive and Memory	199
7.6 Physiological and Neuroimmunological Correlates	199
8 Power Motivation	202
H.-D. Schmalt and H. Heckhausen
8.1 Power: Concepts and Constructs	202
8.1.1 Power and Power Motivation	203

8.1.2 Sources of Power	205	10.2.5 Motivation Can Be Need Driven, Incentive Driven, or Both	250
8.1.3 Forms and Goals of Power Behavior	207	10.2.6 Motivation Is Characterized by Flexibility of Cue-Reward and Means-End Relationships	251
8.1.4 Approach and Avoidance in Power Motivation	209	10.2.7 Motivation Has Conscious and Nonconscious Aspects	251
8.1.5 Connecting Expectancy and Value	209	10.3 Brain Structures Generally Involved in Motivation	252
8.1.6 Developmental Stages of Power	210	10.3.1 Amygdala: Recognizing Rewards and Punishments at a Distance	252
8.1.7 Power and Dominance in Evolution	212	10.3.2 The Mesolimbic Dopamine System: Scaling the "Magnetic" Pull of Incentives	254
8.2 Measuring the Power Motive	213	10.3.3 The Orbitofrontal Cortex: Evaluating Rewards and Punishments	255
8.2.1 The TAT Method	213	10.3.4 The Lateral Prefrontal Cortex: Motivational Regulation and Override	259
8.2.2 The Grid Technique	217	10.4 Specific Motivational Systems	260
8.3 The Neurobiology of the Power Motive	219	10.4.1 Feeding	260
8.3.1 Endocrinological Factors	219	10.4.2 Affiliation and Attachment	263
8.3.2 Psychoimmunological Factors	219	10.4.3 Dominance	265
8.4 An Influential Trio: The Power, Achievement, and Affiliation Motives	220	10.4.4 Sex	267
8.4.1 Experimental Studies in Game Settings	221	10.5 Conclusion	269
8.4.2 Economic Perspectives	221	11 Motivation and Volition in the Course of Action	272
8.4.3 Political Perspectives	223	A. Achtziger and P. M. Gollwitzer
8.4.4 War and Peace	224	11.1 Characteristics of the Action Perspective	272
9 Implicit and Explicit Motives	227	11.2 The Rubicon Model of Action Phases	273
J. Brunstein		11.2.1 Action Phases	273
9.1 Theoretical Concepts and Background	227	11.2.2 Motivational vs. Volitional Action Phases	276
9.2 Evidence for the Independence of Implicit and Explicit Motives	229	11.3 Action Phases and Mindsets: How Can Psychological Processes Be Incorporated in an Idealized, Structural Model?	276
9.2.1 Zero Correlations Between Direct and Indirect Measures of Motives	229	11.4 Contrasting Effects of Deliberative and Implemental Mindsets	278
9.2.2 Behavioral Correlates of Implicit and Explicit Motives	231	11.4.1 Cognitive Tuning Toward Task-Congruent Information	279
9.2.3 Motive-Arousing Incentives	233	11.4.2 Processing of Relevant and Irrelevant Information	279
9.2.4 Differences in Child-Rearing Practices and Development	234	11.4.3 Biased Processing of Information Relating to Goal Feasibility and Desirability	279
9.3 Cognitive and Affective Needs	237	11.4.4 Mindsets and Self-Evaluation	281
9.4 The Interaction of Implicit and Explicit Motives	239	11.4.5 Moderator Effects in the Deliberative and Implemental Mindsets	281
9.4.1 Coalitions	239	11.4.6 Mindsets and Goal Achievement	282
9.4.2 Conflicts	240	11.4.7 Concluding Discussion: Mindsets and Self-Regulation of Goal Striving	282
9.4.3 Harmonization of Implicit and Explicit Motives	242	11.5 Different Kinds of Intentions: Goal Intentions and Implementation Intentions	283
9.5 Theoretical and Practical Implications of the Concept of Dual Motives	244	11.5.1 How Do Implementation Intentions Work?	283
10 Biopsychological Aspects of Motivation	247
O. C. Schultheiss and M. M. Wirth
10.1 A Primer on Biopsychology and Its Methods	247
10.2 Hallmarks of Motivation	248
10.2.1 Motivated Behavior Comes in Two Basic Flavors: Approach and Avoidance Motivation	248
10.2.2 Motivation Consists of Two Distinct Phases	249
10.2.3 Many Qualitatively Different Types of Rewards Can Stimulate Motivation	249
10.2.4 Motivation Is Dynamic	250

11.5.2 Implementation Intentions and the Initiation of Wanted Behavior	286
11.6 Implementation Intentions and the Control of Unwanted Behavior	287
11.6.1 Suppression-Oriented Implementation Intentions	288
11.6.2 Blocking Detrimental Self-States by Planning Wanted Behavior	289
11.6.3 Blocking Adverse Contextual Influences by Planning Wanted Behavior	290
11.7 Potential Costs of Implementation Intentions	291
11.7.1 Implementation Intentions and Behavioral Rigidity	291
11.7.2 Implementation Intentions and Ego Depletion	292
11.7.3 Implementation Intentions and Rebound Effects	293
11.8 Discussion and Future Perspectives	293
11.8.1 Implementation Intentions: A Foolproof Self-Regulatory Strategy?	293
11.8.2 Prospective Memory and Neuronal Substrates	293

12 Individual Differences in Self-Regulation 296

J. Kuhl

12.1 Reflections on the Neglect of Individual Differences in Psychological Research	296
12.2 Motives as Need-Oriented Self-Regulatory Systems	297
12.2.1 Needs: Subaffective Detectors of Discrepancies Between Actual and Desired States	298
12.2.2 Affective and Cognitive Systems: Need-Relevant System Configurations	298
12.2.3 Implicit Motives: Intelligent Needs Serving the Context-Sensitive Regulation of Behavior	300
12.3 Will Without Homunculus: Decomposing Global Concepts of Will	304
12.3.1 Internal Dictatorship vs. Democracy: Self-Control and Self-Regulation	305
12.3.2 Progression vs. Regression: Stress-Related Volitional Inhibition and Inhibition of the Self	307
12.4 Affect-Regulatory Competencies: Action vs. State Orientation	308
12.4.1 The Core of the Construct: Self-Regulation of Affect	308
12.4.2 Effects of Action and State Orientation	311
12.5 PSI Theory: Affect-Modulated Interactions of Systems Relevant to Personality	314
12.5.1 Psychological Macrosystems	314
12.5.2 The First Modulation Assumption: Volitional Facilitation	315

12.5.3 The Second Modulation Assumption: Self-Access and Self-Development	317
12.6 Development: Determinants of Action and State Orientation	318

13 Intrinsic Motivation and Flow 323

F. Rheinberg

13.1 Introduction	323
13.2 Defining "Intrinsic Motivation": In Pursuit of a Phantom	325
13.2.1 The Problem	325
13.2.2 Intrinsic in the Sense of "in the Activity"	325
13.2.3 Intrinsic Motivation as the Need for Self-Determination and Competence	326
13.2.4 Intrinsic Motivation as Interest and Involvement	327
13.2.5 Intrinsic in the Sense of a Correspondence Between Means and Ends	328
13.2.6 Goal Orientation and Intrinsic Motivation	329
13.2.7 So What Exactly Is Intrinsic Motivation?	330
13.2.8 The Undermining Effect of External Rewards: Myth or Reality?	330
13.2.9 Terminological Implications	331
13.3 Purpose- and Activity-Related Incentives in the Extended Cognitive Model of Motivation	332
13.3.1 The Purpose-Oriented Model of Rational Behavior	332
13.3.2 The Role of Activity-Related Incentives	333
13.4 Qualitative Analyses of Activity-Related Incentives	334
13.4.1 Standardized Assessment of Quality of Experience	334
13.4.2 Assessing Activity-Specific Incentives	335
13.4.3 The Activity-Related Incentive of Achievement Motivation	336
13.5 Flow: Joyful Absorption in an Activity	337
13.5.1 The Phenomenon	337
13.5.2 Qualitative Flow Research	338
13.5.3 Quantitative Flow Research	339
13.5.4 A Revision of the Model	340
13.5.5 The Expertise Effect and Resistance to the Undermining of Intrinsic Motivation	341
13.5.6 Flow and Achievement	342
13.6 Future Prospects: The Flow Hypothesis of Motivational Competence	343

14 Causal Attribution of Behavior and Achievement 349

J. Stiensmeier-Pelster and H. Heckhausen

14.1 Causal Attribution: How Thinking About Causes Influences Behavior	349
--	-----

14.2 Weiner's Attributional Analysis of Motivation, Emotion, and Behavior	350	15.5 Parent-Child Interaction: The Cradle of Action	394
14.3 Attribution Theories	353	15.6 Developmental Preconditions of Achievement-Motivated Behavior	396
14.3.1 Basic Assumptions	353	15.6.1 Distinguishing Between Degrees of Task Difficulty and Personal Competence	396
14.3.2 Causal Search: Triggering Conditions, Duration, and Intensity	354	15.6.2 Distinguishing Causal Conceptions of Ability and Effort	397
14.3.3 Processes of Causal Attribution: Normative Models	359	15.6.3 Cognitive Preconditions for Setting Levels of Aspiration	399
14.3.4 Processes of Causal Attribution: Descriptive Perspectives	370	15.6.4 Causal Schemata for Ability and Effort	403
14.4 Attributional Theories	374	15.7 Development of Individual Differences in Motive Strength and Action Regulation Systems	407
14.4.1 Attribution and Changes in Expectancy	375	15.7.1 Implicit Motives	407
14.4.2 Attributional Analysis of Hopelessness Depression	376	15.7.2 Specific Incentives and Expectancies	408
14.4.3 Attributional Analysis of Aggressive Behavior	380	15.7.3 Generalized Goal Orientations	411
15 Motivation and Development	384	15.7.4 Regulation of Motivation and Action	413
J. Heckhausen and H. Heckhausen		15.7.5 Differential Developmental Pathways: Critical Phases, Life-Course Transitions, and Universal Developmental Milestones	415
15.1 Development of Control Striving Across the Lifespan: A Fundamental Phenomenon of Motivational Development	384	15.8 The Motivation of Developmental Regulation	423
15.2 Early Control Striving	386	15.8.1 The Life Course as a Field of Action	423
15.3 Focusing on the Intended Outcome of an Action	387	15.8.2 The Action-Phase Model of Developmental Regulation	427
15.4 Establishment of Personal Competence as an Action Incentive	388	15.8.3 Individual Differences in the Capacity for Developmental Regulation	438
15.4.1 Pride and Shame – Emotions Between Achievement and Power	389	15.8.4 Motivated Development: Dynamic Interaction Between Development and Motivation Across the Lifespan	439
15.4.2 Risks of Self-Evaluative Responses	391	References	445
15.4.3 Strategies to Counteract or Avoid Negative Self-Evaluation	392	Index	501