

TABLE OF CONTENTS

LIST OF TABLES	xiii
LIST OF FIGURES.....	xiv
ABBREVIATIONS.....	xv
CHAPTER 1: INTRODUCTION	1
Epistemological problems in early trade	2
Socrates and Occam: bookends for an ideal analysis	2
Theory, model and structure: analysis in the real world	3
Floating models: great estates and the substantivist-formalist debate	4
Balancing models: moving past the substantivist-formalist debate	7
Disturbed by trade (past and present)	9
The shipwreck at Uluburun, Turkey: lost at sea in the Late Bronze Age.....	10
Tel Nami: a 13 th century exchange node	15
Orienting analysis toward exchange	20
Keeping sociology and economics in “socioeconomic”	20
Organization of chapters and the means and relations of exchange	22
CHAPTER 2: THE HISTORICAL SETTING	25
A World Bound by Writing.....	25
The Aegean and Aḫḫiyawa.....	27
The Hittite empire	29
Two economically useful Hittite vassals: Ugarit and Emar	31
Hatti and Assyria	32
The Egyptian empire in Syria-Palestine	33
Cyprus (Alašiya), copper supplier to empires	35
Economic motivations	36
People in the margins	36
Impressions of the age	37
CHAPTER 3: THE TECHNOLOGY OF LONG-DISTANCE TRADE	39
Weights.....	39
Scales in the sky: an enduring icon of fate, order, and judgment.....	40
Weights in practical context	48
Seals	56
Sealing in the Levant	56
Sealing in Assyria	63
Storage.....	65
Storage in Aššur.....	65
Labels	69
Transportation: distance, donkeys, and cargoes.....	70
Cargoes in Egyptian texts.....	73
Cargoes in texts from Ugarit	75
Cargoes in texts from Assyria.....	80
Transportation: the capacities of ships, boats, and other vessels	82
Source of the problem	83
Riverine vs. seafaring craft.....	84

Unknown quantities	88
Other nautical matters in texts	89
Terms for ships	89
Nautical support on shore	89
Ship equipment	90
Ownership and control of ships	94
Summary	100
CHAPTER 4: FINANCE, CONDUCT, AND LITERACY	105
Finance	105
Royal investment	105
Maritime finance	108
Finance implied in maritime law at Ugarit	115
Kinship finance	116
Credit	116
Middle Assyrian credit	117
Credit in Syria	122
Merchant associations	123
Egyptian finance	125
Summary of finance in texts	125
Exchange conduct	126
Trust through brotherhood: the "royal model"	127
Trust and business: the entrepreneurial model	133
Intersecting modes of conduct	139
Literacy	140
Who was literate?	140
Practical uses of literacy	143
The scribe and the merchant	144
References to literacy in business documents	145
Summary	148
Finance	149
Modes of exchange conduct	149
Literacy and commerce	150
CHAPTER 5: RELATIONS BETWEEN TRADERS AND RULERS	151
Trader-state relations at Ugarit	151
Opinions on trader-state relations at Ugarit	151
Administrative texts	157
Diagramming the oversight of trade	170
Trader-state relations in juridical texts at Ugarit	173
Trader-state ventures at Ugarit	181
Trader-state relations in Egypt	189
Egyptian economy: open or closed?	189
Privatized trade in Egypt?	190
Pictorial evidence	191
Trader-state relations in Hatti	192
Klengel's hypothesis	192
Who were the merchants of Ura?	194
Trader-state relations in the Aegean	196

Homeric questions	197
Trader-state relations in Assyria	199
Trader-state relations—conclusions and impressions	203
CHAPTER 6: FAMILIAL AND ETHNIC RELATIONSHIPS	207
Familial relationships	207
Family in Assyrian trade	208
Family in trade at Ugarit	210
Family in Egyptian trade: pictorial evidence	212
Summary regarding family	215
Ethnic relationships	215
Finding “ethnicity” in the texts	216
Marking the minority in texts relevant to LBA trade	217
Ethnic markers in Syrian texts	219
Ethnic markers in Assyrian texts	222
Ethnic markers in Hittite texts	222
Ethnic markers in Egyptian texts	223
Ethnic markers in Aegean texts	226
Summary of textual evidence for ethnic relationships	230
A sociological view of LBA ethnic trading groups	231
Solving the ethnic trader’s dilemma	238
Broader implications—the Joseph story inverted?	241
CHAPTER 7: PRODUCTION, CLASS, AND THE ENTREPRENEURIAL SPHERE	243
Theoretical contributions on production, exchange, and class	243
Production and exchange in archaeology	245
World-systems contributions to production and exchange theory	248
Assyriological contributions	250
Summary: class as mode of accumulation or access to wealth	251
Textual evidence of producer-trader relationships	252
Silent spots and scales of production	252
The Cyprus problem	253
Production in Assyria	255
Trader-producer relations at Ugarit	255
Production in Ugarit—a question of sectors	264
Production at Ugarit—what would Weber do?	266
Conclusions	271
Decentralized economies	271
The entrepreneurial sphere and its classes	273
CHAPTER 8: TRADE, TRADITION, AND TRANSFORMATION	277
Synopsis: towards the merchant’s perspective	277
Chapter 3: rational techniques, practices, and organization	277
Chapter 4: raising and discussing money	278
Chapter 5: the trader-state symbiosis	279
Chapter 6: families and foreigners	279
Chapter 7: production and class viewed as sectors and in the round	281
The role of the merchant	281
Competing and cooperating ideals	284

Profit-seeking and traditionalism	284
Capitalism and its contents	285
The importance of intersocietal networks	287
Capitalists in Late Bronze Age settings.....	290
Implications and transformations	292
A limited view of production and exchange chains	292
Modeling transformation and collapse	292
Who watches the scales?	297
On the weight of a socioeconomic phenomenon.....	298
 BIBLIOGRAPHY	 299
 Word index.....	 355
Text index.....	357
Subject index.....	361