Contents

Preface ................................................................. xiii

Chapter 1
Multimodal (Inter)action Analysis ................................. 1
1.1 Multimodal (Inter)action Analysis: Some Background ........ 2
1.2 From Discourse Analysis to Multimodal (Inter)action Analysis 4
   1.2.1 Discourse Analysis: Example 1 ............................ 6
   1.2.2 Discourse Analysis: The Problem .......................... 8
   1.2.3 Multimodal (Inter)action Analysis: Example 1 Revisited 8
   1.2.4 Is Identity Visible? ........................................... 13
   1.2.5 Discourse Analysis: Example 2 ............................ 15
   1.2.6 Multimodal (Inter)action Analysis: Example 2 Revisited 18
1.3 Moving Towards a Holistic Analysis ......................... 23
   1.3.1 A Holistic Analysis: Some Implications .................. 23
1.4 Structure of the Book ............................................. 24

Chapter 2
Identity in (Inter)action: Theoretical Concepts ................ 29
2.1 Identity: A Discussion ........................................... 29
2.2 Is Identity Intentional? .......................................... 34
2.3 Multimodal (Inter)action Analysis: Theory ................. 35
   2.3.1 Action ....................................................... 37
   2.3.2 Mediational Means or Cultural Tools ........................ 42
   2.3.3 Site of Engagement ......................................... 44
   2.3.4 Practice and Nexus of Practice ............................. 46
2.4 Foreground-Background Continuum ............................... 47
   2.4.1 Frame Analysis of Focused Interactions ................. 47
   2.4.2 Foreground, Mid-Ground, and Background ................ 48
   2.4.3 Foreground-Background Continuum: A New Notion for (Inter)action and Identity .......... 48
2.5 Site of Engagement, Action, the Foreground-Background
   Continuum, and Identity ........................................... 51
Chapter 3
Collecting and Transcribing Ethnographic Data:
A Case Study of Two Women Living in Germany

3.1 Data Collection: What Was Collected for This Study?
   3.1.1 Creative Writing about the Participants as
       One Data Collection Method
   3.1.2 An Average Day in the Field.

3.2 What Does Creative Writing Add to Descriptive Field Notes,
    Collected Texts, Audio and Video Recordings?

3.3 The Participants
   3.3.1 Andrea: A Self-Description
   3.3.2 Anna: A Self-Description

3.4 Collecting and Transcribing Multimodal Data
   3.4.1 Multimodal Data
   3.4.2 Multimodal Transcription
   3.4.3 What Is a Transcript?

3.5 A Flexible Transcription System
   3.5.1 Some Conventions: Spoken Language
   3.5.2 Some Conventions: Proxemics
   3.5.3 Some Conventions: Posture
   3.5.4 Some Conventions: Gesture
   3.5.5 A Need to Transcribe Qualitatively
   3.5.6 The Flexible Component in Multimodal Transcription
   3.5.7 Some Flexible Conventions: Modal Relationships in Interaction
   3.5.8 Modal Configurations of Actions

3.6 Modal Hierarchies: Considerations for Transcription

Chapter 4
Modal Density, Actions, and Identity

4.1 Focused Actions and Phenomenological Identity Production
   4.1.1 High Modal Density: Intensity of a Mode
   4.1.2 High Modal Density: Modal Complexity
   4.1.3 High Modal Density: Intensity Plus Modal Complexity

4.2 Mid-Grounded Actions and Phenomenological Identity Production
   4.2.1 Medium Modal Density: Intensity of a Mode
   4.2.2 Medium Modal Density: Modal Complexity
   4.2.3 Medium Modal Density: Intensity Plus Modal Complexity
4.3 Backgrounded Actions and Phenomenological Identity Production ........................................... 106
  4.3.1 Low Modal Density: Intensity of a Mode ................................................................. 106
  4.3.2 Low Modal Density: Modal Complexity ................................................................. 107
  4.3.3 Low Modal Density: Intensity Plus Modal Complexity ............................................. 109

4.4 Modal Density: A Relational Notion ...................................................................................... 110
  4.4.1 Modal Density, Matched and Mismatched Attention Levels ......................................... 111

4.5 Interview, Site of Engagement, Action, and Modal Density ................................................... 118
  4.5.1 Higher-Level Action: Personal Identity ........................................................................ 120
  4.5.2 Higher-Level Action: Family Identity .......................................................................... 125
  4.5.3 Higher-Level Action: Friend Identity .......................................................................... 126
  4.5.4 Higher-Level Action: Italian Identity ......................................................................... 130
  4.5.5 Higher-Level Action: Caterer Identity ........................................................................ 133

4.6 Site of Engagement, Interview, Actions, and Identity ............................................................. 136

Chapter 5
Horizontal Identity Production; and Mastery and Appropriation of Identity Elements .................. 141

5.1 Horizontal Interwoven Identity Elements .............................................................................. 142
  5.1.1 Focused Higher-Level Actions and Parallel Identity Element Production .................. 143
  5.1.2 Matched and Mismatched Levels of Attention in Interactions .................................... 147

5.2 Identity: Mastery and Appropriation ..................................................................................... 155
  5.2.1 Magazines and Identity Production ........................................................................... 156

5.3 Interview and Horizontal Identity Production ........................................................................ 158
  5.3.1 Foregrounded Family Identity Element ..................................................................... 161
  5.3.2 Foregrounded Personal Identity Element .................................................................. 162
  5.3.3 Foregrounded Divorcee Identity Element .................................................................. 163
  5.3.4 Foregrounded National Identity Element .................................................................... 165
  5.3.5 Foregrounded International Identity Element ............................................................. 167
  5.3.6 Identity beyond the Foreground: Simultaneous Identity Element Production ............. 168
  5.3.7 Identity Produced through Micro and Macro Actions .................................................. 176

5.4 Transcription of Macro Data ................................................................................................. 177

Chapter 6
Vertical Identity Production .......................................................................................................... 179

6.1 Identity and Layers of Discourse ......................................................................................... 179
6.2 Outer Layers of Discourse: Producing a General Identity Element 181
   6.2.1 Two Divergent Outer Layers of Discourse 181
   6.2.2 General Identity 186
6.3 Intermediary Layer of Discourse: Producing a Continuous Identity Element 187
   6.3.1 Continuous Identity 191
6.4 The Central Layer of Discourse: Producing an Immediate Identity Element 194
   6.4.1 Immediate Identity 196
6.5 General Identity: Coercion or Agency? 197
6.6 Continuous Identity: Coercion or Agency? 198
6.7 Immediate Identity: Coercion or Agency? 200
6.8 Layers of Discourse, Actions, and Modes 202
6.9 Vertical and Horizontal Identity Production 209

Chapter 7
Shifting Identity, Saliency of Identity, and Identity Change 211
7.1 Higher-Level Discourse Structure: Identity Shifts 211
   7.1.1 Theoretical Background 212
7.2 Semantic/Pragmatic Means: The Beat 213
7.3 Semantic/Pragmatic Means: The Head Toss 214
   7.3.1 Shopping in an Italian Supermarket 215
   7.3.2 Head Toss: Shift in Focus and Shift in Foregrounded Identity Element 217
7.4 Semantic/Pragmatic Means: The Hand/Finger Beat 220
   7.4.1 Writing Shopping Lists 220
   7.4.2 Hand/Finger Beat: Shift in Focus and Shift in Foregrounded Identity Element 227
7.5 Semantic/Pragmatic Means: Deictics 230
   7.5.1 Deictic Gaze Plus Talk 230
   7.5.2 Deictic Motion Plus Talk 232
7.6 Signaling System: A Discussion 232
7.7 Saliency of Identity Elements 233
7.8 Identity Change 235
   7.8.1 Initial Identity Element: Wife 235
   7.8.2 Auxiliary Identity Element: Artist 238
   7.8.3 From Initial to New Identity Element: Divorcee 243
7.9 Self-Perception of Identity 246
Chapter 8
Stabilizing Identity ......................................................... 251
8.1 Stabilizing Identity: An Overview ................................. 252
8.2 Person Identity: Anna ............................................... 257
  8.2.1 Person Identity: Anna’s Habitus ............................... 258
  8.2.2 Stabilizing Person Identity: Higher-Level,
       Lower-Level, and Frozen Actions ........................... 265
8.3 Stabilizing Person Identity: Interweaving Identity Elements .... 269
8.4 Stabilizing Person Identity: A Discussion ........................ 271
8.5 Stabilization of Person Identity: Complex Links ............... 272

Chapter 9
Investigating Identity in (Inter)action .............................. 275
9.1 Determining Identity Elements .................................... 275
9.2 The Need for Ethnography and Inclusion of Creative Data ...... 278
9.3 Differentiating Concepts ......................................... 279
9.4 Investigating Identity in (Inter)action through
       Multimodal (Inter)action Analysis ........................... 285

References ................................................................. 287

Index ................................................................. 295