Contents

Roland Lößler
Introduction. Robinson Crusoe tries again or: Werner Ustorf’s way of developing missiology into a research concept of global and pluralistic Christianity 7

Part I: Religion in a Revolutionary Age
1. Bremen: Believing Revolutionaries – Revolutionary Believers 21
2. London: Equiano and the Black Spirituality of Freedom 31
3. Weimar: the Fusion of the Enlightenment and Christianity according to Herder 46

Part II: Religion in the Colonial Twilight
4. Dreams of Empire and the Christian Transcendent 59
5. A Wounded Healer: the Missionary Self 74
6. Cognitive Violence: the Missionary as a Scholar 86
7. Protestant Missions – a Retrospective 100

Part III: Dark Transcendence: the Totalitarian Resurrection
8. Prophet of Post-Christianity – Hauer’s Project of Liberating the “Nordic Soul” 115
9. Strange Attraction: the Missions and the “Brown” Revival 133
10. Theological Discernment: “Political Religion” 146
11. The Muscular Church: Three Drafts of a Post-War Christian Europe 174
Part IV: Church Decline and Religious Innovation in "God's Continent"

12. Reverse Mission – Treating Europeans as Africans ................. 189
13. Charting the Future – Mapmakers and Local Scouts ............... 203
14. The Rediscovery of "Primal" Religion ................................... 216
15. Theological Responses to Europe's Multi-Religious Turn .......... 238

Postscript ................................................................. 251

Bibliography Werner Ustorf, 1975–2010 ............................... 255

List of PhD Theses supervised by Werner Ustorf at his Chair of Mission, University of Birmingham and awarded between 1993 and 2009 .......... 265

Index of Persons ......................................................... 269