

Contents

List of Illustrations xiii

Preface xxix

1. Introduction

1.1. Fashionable Trends in Modern Hogarthian Scholarship: From New Historicism to Post-Structuralist Ambiguity and Gender-Oriented Studies 1

1.2. A Reassessment of the Bawdy in Hogarth and his Art 8

2. Hogarth: the Bawdy Moralist?

2.1. Hogarth the Moralist: Questioning the Traditional View 12

2.1.1. The Unidealised Child as Opposed to the Sentimentalised Darling 15

2.1.2. Charitable Acts Sprinkled with Uncharitable Motifs 19

2.1.3. The Campaign against Alcoholism 20

2.1.4. The Depiction of Cruelty 23

2.1.5. Taking a Delight in Cruel and Abhorrent Scenes 29

2.1.6. Industry and Idleness and the Strange Symbolism of Aaron Hill's Moral Garden 37

2.1.7. The Massacre of the Innocents at Tom Idle's Execution 40

2.2. Hogarth the Frolicsome, Sarcastic, Pugnacious Man about Town	43
2.2.1. Outwardly Following the Path of Moral Purpose	43
2.2.2. Showing the Frailty and Dark Side of Every Situation	46
2.2.3. Ugly Faces without Grace	48
2.2.4. Interest in the Physiognomy of Criminals	52
2.2.5. Little of the Noble in Hogarth's Character and Art	54
2.2.6. A Predilection for Lower Amusements	56
2.2.7. Hogarth's Intolerance against Criticism and his Attacks upon Fellow Artists	59
2.2.8. Enjoying London's Bibulous Club and Pub Life	68
2.2.9. Obscene Amusements	72
2.3. Hogarth the Self-Seeking and Stubborn Opportunist	74
2.3.1. Ambitions to Excel in High Art: The Unhappy Case of Sigismunda	75
2.3.2. Flattering Portrait Painting	87
2.3.3. Ambitious Self-Portraits	89
2.3.4. Painting and Engraving for Money	90
2.3.5. Hogarth the Astute Businessman	95
3. Hogarth's Hidden Parts: The Bawdy Facts
3.1. Boys Peeping at Nature	102
3.2. English Pornography and French Eroticism	108

3.2.1. Obscene British Prints	110
3.2.2. Risqué French Rococo	116
3.3. Still an Unresolved Paradox: Moral Purpose and Bawdiness in Hogarth's Art	120
3.3.1. Before and After	120
3.3.2. The Call of Nature	124
3.4. Forbidden Lowliness in High Art	131
3.4.1. Low Dutch Taste	131
3.4.2. Hogarth and Dutch Art	133
3.5. Smutty Motifs versus False Opinions	137
3.6. Animal Genitalia Signalling the States of Human Penile Erection	139
3.7. Objects as Substitutes for Men's Genitalia	142
3.7.1. Scrotal Periwigs and a Phallic Effigy of Hudibras	142
3.7.2. Gulliver's Clyster	143
3.7.3. Heterosexual or Sodomitical Preferences?	145
3.7.4. Lust in Hogarth's Sleeping Congregation and National Potency in Night	151
3.7.5. Phallic Choreography in the Country Dance	153
3.7.6. Spiritual and Carnal Excesses: Indecent Exposure in the Pulpit	155
3.8. The Lustful Clergyman	158
3.9. Worldly Authorities' Penises	161

3.10. Defloration and Infantile Sadomasochism	163
3.11. Public Onanism Driving People Mad	166
3.12. Female Pudenda	170
3.12.1. Carnal Sensuality in the Strolling Actresses	171
3.12.2. A Lad Peeping at Nature during the Lord Mayor's Procession	172
3.12.3. The Harlot's Cat in Heat	173
3.12.4. The Cunnus in Cunicularii	174
3.12.5. Musical Ecstasy in The Toilette	177
3.12.6. Hogarth's Erotic Cottage	178
3.13. There is no Indecency in History Painting	180
4. Attempts at Deeper Understandings
4.1. The Lustful and Phallic Eighteenth Century	182
4.2. Promiscuity and Harlotry in London	188
4.3. Eros at the English Masquerade	195
4.4. Immodest Media: Obscenities on Windows— Lewd Writings—Lascivious Songs—Indecent Prints	197
4.5. Hogarth's Bawdy Lifestyle	203
4.6. Love or Sexual Abuse of Children?	206
4.6.1. Abused Boys in Evening and Noon ?	206
4.6.2. Child Abuse in Hogarth's Day	208

4.6.3. Child Murder and Child Mortality	211
4.6.4. Sexual Abuse of Children	213
4.6.5. Hogarth among the Abusers?	217
4.6.6. Hogarth's Predilection for Underage Girls	227
4.7. Hogarth among the Rakes of the Hell Fire Club	229
4.8. Allusions Affording Amusement	232
4.8.1. Comic Puns in Hogarth's Works	233
4.8.2. Comic Puns and Sexual Allusion in Eighteenth-Century Literature	236
4.9. Mingling, and Replacing, the High with the Low	244
4.9.1. Scatology in Pope and Swift	246
4.9.2. "Shit" and "Stink" in Smollett's Satire	248
4.9.3. Less Crude Humour in Hogarth's Art	249
4.10. Teasing the Connoisseurs by Denigrating their Beloved Old Masters	252
4.10.1. Anti-Iconography in A Rake's Progress	253
4.10.2. Ironic Allusions to a Florentine Spotalizio in Plate 5 of A Rake's Progress	255
4.10.3. Hidden Allusions to Raphael's Transfiguration in Plate 6 of A Rake's Progress	259
4.10.4. Chairing the Members : Hogarth's Satiric Play with Motifs taken from Raphael's Expulsion of Heliodorus	266
4.10.5. Allusions to Raphael, Rubens, Fra Angelico, Rembrandt and Caravaggio in Paul before Felix and its Burlesque Version	269

4.10.6. Additional Examples of Hogarth's Satirical Borrowing from Traditional Religious Art	277
4.10.7. References to Pagan Mythology and "Low" Dutch Imagery	281
4.10.8. Just Who Was Aware of Hogarth's Hidden Borrowings?	283
4.11. Ambiguous Allusion as a Display of Wit	285
4.11.1. Imitation of Others as a Recommended Artistic Practice	286
4.11.2. Hogarth's Critical Attitude Towards Imitation	293
4.11.3. Differing Concepts of Wit	295
4.11.4. Hogarth's Place within the Tradition of Wit	300
4.12. Being Very British: Freedom of Thought, Natural Humour, Raillery and Ridicule	301
4.12.1. English Pride: Comic Representations of Absurdities and Follies	304
4.12.2. "False Wit" Practised at Witty Assemblies	310
4.12.3. The Test of Ridicule	312
4.12.4. A Claim for "Loose Essays:" Views of Lewd and Dissolute London Life	314
4.13. Different Levels of Allusion in Hogarth's Art	317
4.13.1. Joking at a Superficial Level: Inappropriate Sexual Allusion within Hogarth's Conversation Pieces	317
4.13.2. Hogarth "Trumping" Captain Lord George Graham	321

4.13.3. Private and Sexually Allusive Jokes: The Garrick Affair	322
4.13.4. Boredom with Conversation Pieces: A Turning Towards "Modern Moral Subjects"	327
4.14. Differing, Deeper and Darker Degrees of Hogarth's Hidden Humour	330
4.14.1. The English Parlour Game: Solving Witty Pictorial Enigmas and Cross-Readings	330
4.14.2. Contrasting Different Ideas, Principles, Attitudes and Styles	333
4.14.3. Delving into Deeper Levels of Humour	334
4.14.4. The Most Advanced Levels of Allusion: Witty Quotations from High Art	335
4.15. Blasphemy and Dark Humour	338
4.15.1. A Jew Sacrificing a Louse in Honour to a Blind and Lame Old God the Father	339
4.15.2. George Fox Sneezing in The Cockpit	342
4.15.3. Transubstantiation Satirized	342
4.15.4. Dark Humour as to be later seen in Luis Buñuel's Viridiana , Monty Python's The Life of Brian , or Surrealist Anti-Clericalism	350
4.16. Hogarth's Personal "Iconoclasm"	354
4.16.1. Struggles in Finding Alternative Explanations	355
4.16.2. Hogarth as a Successor of Puritan Iconoclasm?	357
4.16.3. Deistic Demystification	360
4.16.4. The Anti-Iconography – a Method of Exposing Connoisseurs: Beating the Art Market at its own Game	363

4.17. Blasphemy over the Edge	370
4.17.1. Christ Making Love to His Mother	370
4.17.2. A Mirrored Triangle: "Dog" as the Inverse of "God"	372
4.17.3. The Holy Ghost in a Murderer's Brain	373
4.17.4. The "Heav'nly Wind" as a Fart	374
4.18. A Wild Satyr: Having a Lasting Laugh	380
5. Bibliography
5.1. Primary Sources	389
5.2. Secondary Sources	402
6. Index	449