

Contents

Preface ix

Introductory overview

What are exceptions? And what can be done about them? 3
Horst J. Simon and Heike Wiese

Coming to grips with exceptions 31
Edith Moravcsik

Classical loci for exceptions: morphology and the lexicon

Exceptions to stress and harmony in Turkish: co-phonologies or prespecification? 59
Bariş Kabak and Irene Vogel

Lexical exceptions as prespecification: some critical remarks 95
T.A. Hall

Feature spreading, lexical specification and truncation 103
Bariş Kabak and Irene Vogel

Higher order exceptionality in inflectional morphology 107
Greville G. Corbett

An I-language view of morphological ‘exceptionality’: Comments on Corbett’s paper 127
Stephen R. Anderson

Exceptions and what they tell us: reflections on Anderson’s comments . 135
Greville G. Corbett

How do exceptions arise? On different paths to morphological irregularity 139
Damaris Nübling

On the role of subregularities in the rise of exceptions 163
Wolfgang U. Dressler

Statement on the commentary by Wolfgang U. Dressler	169
Damaris Nübling

Taking into account interactions of grammatical sub-systems

Lexical variation in relativizer frequency	175
Thomas Wasow, T. Florian Jaeger, and David M. Orr
Corpus evidence and the role of probability estimates in processing decisions	197
Ruth Kempson
Response to Kempson's comments	205
Thomas Wasow, T. Florian Jaeger and David Orr
Structured exceptions and case selection in Insular Scandinavian	213
Jóhannes Gísli Jónsson and Thórhallur Eythórsson
Remarks on two kinds of exceptions: arbitrary vs. structured exceptions	243
Susann Fischer
Response to Susann Fischer	251
Jóhannes Gísli Jónsson and Thórhallur Eythórsson

Loosening the strictness of grammar

Three approaches to exceptionality in syntactic typology	255
Frederick J. Newmeyer
Remarks on three approaches to exceptionality in syntactic typology . .	283
Artemis Alexiadou
A reply to the commentary by Artemis Alexiadou	289
Frederick J. Newmeyer
Three types of exceptions – and all of them rule-based	291
Sam Featherston
Anomalies and exceptions	325
Hubert Haider
Distinguishing lexical and syntactic exceptions	335
Sam Featherston

Disagreement, variation, markedness, and other apparent exceptions . . .	339
Ralf Vogel
What is an exception to what? – Some comments on Ralf Vogel's contribution	361
Henk van Riemsdijk
Response to van Riemsdijk	369
Ralf Vogel
Describing exceptions in a formal grammar framework	377
Frederik Fouvry
Explanation and constraint relaxation	401
Pius ten Hacken

Unexpected loci for exceptions: languages and language families

Quantitative explorations of the worldwide distribution of rare characteristics, or: the exceptionality of northwestern European languages	411
Michael Cysouw
Remarks on rarity	433
Östen Dahl
Some more details about the definition of rarity	437
Michael Cysouw
Subject index	443
Language index	449