Contents

1. Introduction
Religious education as research and as practice —
how can we understand the relationship? .................................................................9

Part I: Towards an understanding of research, theory and practice of religious education

2. Taylor on theory and practice .................................................................21

3. Social science as activity system: Yrjö Engeström ................................49

4. Interpretation of RE in and between activity systems .......................68

Part II: Implications of researching religious education as practice

5. Neo-Aristotelianism and the practice of theorizing religious education ........79

6. Facts, values and moral education ...............................................................87

7. Participative research in religious education:
   An argument for a dialectical understanding of theory and practice ........105

8. Religious education as a research discipline:
   An activity theoretical perspective .................................................................118

9. Globalization, economic educational discourse and analytical language in RE research .................................................................134

Epilogue
Reconstructing RE as scientific discipline: A personal account ............149

References ........................................................................................................153