

CONTENTS

vii

Foreword by Richard B. Morris

xv

Preface

3

Introduction

The First American Constitutions
Republicanism, Federalism, and Constitutionalism
The English Constitution in the Eighteenth Century
The Colonists' Theory of Empire
The American Concept of a Constitution
The Founding Spirit

27

1. Government by Congresses and Committees, 1773–1776

The Assumption of Power
Units of Revolutionary Action
A Case Study: The Assumption of Power in Massachusetts
The Committees of Correspondence and the First Continental Congress
The End of Government by Congresses and Committees

49

2. The Role of the Continental Congress, 1775–1776

Massachusetts Requests Advice
A Model Constitution for All the States?
The Initiatives of New Hampshire, South Carolina, and Virginia
The Resolution of May 10 and 15, 1776

63

3. "Choosing Deputies to Form a Government":

The Making of the First State Constitutions

Organizing the "Constituent Power"
Connecticut and Rhode Island
The State Constitutions, 1776–1780

xi

Constituent Power on the Frontier
Practical Limits of the Constituent Power

99

4. "Republic" and "Democracy" in Political Rhetoric

"Republican" as a Smear Word

Criticism of Monarchical Government

Avowal of Republicanism

"Republic" and "Democracy" as Synonyms

The Federalists' Usage in 1787

118

5. Forms versus Principles of Government:

Harnessing Enlightenment Ideas to Anglo-American Institutions

Forms versus Principles

Thomas Paine and John Adams

Ten Principles of Republican Government

129

6. Popular Sovereignty

A European Perspective

Sovereignty Modified by Federalism

The Sovereignty Clauses in the State Constitutions

The Right to Resist Government

The Right to Change a Constitution

Sovereignty Limited by Civil Rights

Popular Sovereignty as the Criterion of Political Radicalism

150

7. Liberty

An Asylum for Which Liberty?

English Liberties and the Debate on Colonial Government and Independence

Liberty and Liberties in the State Constitutions

Liberty and Law

Liberty and Property

164

8. Equality

Equality in the Empire

Equality in the Declaration of Independence

Equality Clauses in the Bills of Rights
Education and Property as Factors of Inequality
Race as a Factor of Inequality
Members Only

189

9. Property

The Colonists and the "natural right of property"
Property Clauses in the State Constitutions
Primogeniture and Entail
Property Qualifications for Voting
The Restrictive Effect of Property Qualifications
Justification and Criticism of Property Qualifications

218

10. The Common Good

The Common Good versus Colonial Rule
The Common Good in the State Constitutions
"Public good is, as it were, a common bank"
Parties, Representation, and the Common Good

230

11. Representation

"Virtual" Representation and the Colonial Assemblies
Representative Democracy
Equal Representation
Composition of Houses of Representatives and Senates
Short Terms of Office
Instructions: Direct Popular Influence on Legislation
The Public Eye
Rotation in Office
A Comparative Outlook

256

12. The Separation of Powers

Colonial Origins
Simple Government Rejected
Unicameral versus Bicameral Legislature
Separation Clauses in the State Constitutions
Beginnings of the Presidential System

276

13. Federalism

Independence and Federation

The Continental Congress in 1774 and 1775

The Articles of Confederation, 1776–1778

The Classic Issues: Representation and Regionalism

The State Constitutions and the Powers of the Confederation

Prospects for a New National Constitution

293

Appendixes

Property Qualifications in First State Constitutions and Election Laws

Rotation in Office as Stipulated in Constitutions from 1776 to 1780

313

Bibliography

335

Index