Part I  A Frontier City

1
Chi Under the Chou Dynasty (ca. 1122–221 B.C.):

- Capital of the Feudal State of Yen ................................................................. 3
  - 1.1 The Founding of the Feudal State of Yen and Its Later Expansion ................................. 3
  - 1.2 The City Chi as the Capital of the State of Yen ................................................... 9
  - 1.3 The Ancient Highway and the Rise of the City Chi ................................................ 10
    - 1.3.1 Conditions of the Physical Geography and the Development of the Ancient Highway .................. 11
    - 1.3.2 The Distribution of the Early Settlements on the Great Plain in Relation to the Ancient Highway ...... 16
    - 1.3.3 Further Development of the Ancient Highway and the Rise of the City Chi ....................... 18

References .............................................................................................................. 20

2
Chi During the Ch’in-Han Period (221 B.C.–A.D. 220):

- A Phase of Commercial Expansion ...................................................................... 21
  - 2.1 Political Status and Geographical Position ......................................................... 21
  - 2.2 A Frontier Emporium ......................................................................................... 25

References .............................................................................................................. 30

3
Chi in the Dark Ages Prior to the Unification of Sui (221–589), with Special Reference to the Development of Local Irrigation ................................. 31

- 3.1 Political Geography .......................................................................................... 31
- 3.2 Beginning of Local Irrigation ............................................................................. 34

References .............................................................................................................. 40
4 Yu Chou of Sui and T'ang Dynasties up to the Khitan Occupation (590–937): Key Position in Frontier Struggle

4.1 Yu Chou (幽州) as a Military Base in the Period of Foreign Enterprises (590–690)

4.2 Yu Chou in the Period of Frontier Defence (690–907)

4.3 Khitan Occupation of Yu Chou (938)

References

Part II The Transitional Phase: A National Centre in the Making

5 Nan-ching (938–1122) of the Liao Dynasty (916–1125)

5.1 Yu Chou as a Cultural Medium

5.2 Nan-ching: A Secondary Capital

References

6 Chung-tu (1151–1215) of the Chin Dynasty (1115–1234)

6.1 The Invasion of the Nüchen

6.2 Chung-tu: A New City on the Old Site

6.3 Watercourses

6.4 Transportation Canals

References

Part III The Capital of the Chinese Empire

7 Khanbaliq (1267–1368) of the Yuan Dynasty (1260–1368)

7.1 The New Site

7.2 A Planned City

7.2.1 The Imperial City

7.2.2 The Great City

7.3 Population and Its Distribution

7.4 The National Centre

References

8 Peking (1420–1911) of the Ming and Ch‘ing Dynasties (1368–1911)

8.1 Rebuilding of the Palace and the City

8.1.1 Refounding of Peking as the Capital

8.1.2 Rebuilding of the Great City

8.1.3 Rebuilding of the Imperial City

8.1.4 Building of the Rampart of the Outer City

8.2 Development of the Royal Parks

8.3 Increase of Population and Its Distribution

8.3.1 Population Increase in Ming

8.3.2 Population Increase in Ch‘ing

8.3.3 Distribution of Population

8.4 Water Supply in Relation to the Transportation of Rice-Tribute

References
Appendices

Appendix I: Historical Chart of Peiping
Appendix II: Literary Authorities on the Study of the Ancient Sites
Appendix III: The Ancient Sites
Appendix IV: The Changing River Courses in the Neighbourhood of Peiping
References