

CONTENTS

Foreword	xv
List of Abbreviations	xvii
Map of Germany, 1949–89	xx
Map of Berlin, 1949–89	xxi
Introduction	I

PART I. THE POLARIZATION OF POSTWAR EUROPE

CHAPTER 1

The Allied War Conferences and Europe's Postwar Order	9
The United States of America and the Anti-Hitler Coalition's Goals for Peace: The Atlantic Charter of 1941	9
The Soviet Precedent in 1944 Poland and Churchill's Warning about the Iron Curtain in 1945	10
Yalta: Controlling Germany without Dismembering It	14
Germany's Forced Reorientation	17
Potsdam 1945	24

CHAPTER 2

New Borders for Germany	31
Poland's Borders and the Separation of Austria and the Eastern Provinces	31
The Demarcation Lines of the Occupation Zones	32
Reparations Borders	34
Berlin: The Four-Sector City	38
Interzonal Trade: An Economic Safety Pin Holding the Divided Country Together	44
The Interzonal Pass: Initial Efforts to Control Travel to and from the East	47
The Inter-German Emigration Movement, 1945–1989/90	48

CHAPTER 3
Two German States	55
Conflicts over the German Party System and the Democratic Elections of 1946	55
The Establishment of Communist Party Rule in the Soviet Zone	59
The Federal Republic of Germany: The West German State	67
Fundamental Decisions for the West German State	70

CHAPTER 4
Western Integration and the Establishment of Socialism:
Competing Systems in a Divided Germany	83
The Federal Republic: Western Integration and the Reclamation of German Sovereignty	83
The Federal Republic's Alignment with the West and Stalin's Peace Note of 1952	87
The GDR in 1952: "Building the Foundations of Socialism"	89

CHAPTER 5
The End of the Postwar Period: The Geneva Summit
and the Transition to "Peaceful Coexistence" in Germany	97
The Geneva Summit of 1955	99
The Beginning of Diplomatic Relations between the Federal Republic and the Soviet Union, and the "Hallstein Doctrine"	100
Peaceful Coexistence in a Divided Germany: The Two-State Doctrine, Plans for a Confederation, and the Rapacki Plan	103
Sputnik and the End of America's "Massive Retaliation" Strategy	105
Nuclear Missiles for the Bundeswehr?	106
The Founding of the European Economic Community	107

PART II. THE FIGHT FOR BERLIN

CHAPTER 6
The First Berlin Crisis, 1948–49	115
Berlin's Historical Significance for the Division of Germany	116
Pivotal Conflicts over Berlin's Political Order after the End of the War	117
Berlin as a Soviet Lever to Shift the Zones of Influence in Germany	118
Conflict over Berlin's Currency Reform, the Blockade, and the Airlift	121
The Division of the City	124
The Ring around Berlin: A New Border	128
Crisis Management as Superpower Diplomacy	129

CHAPTER 7
Stalin's Death and the First Existential Crisis of the GDR: 17 June 1953	135
A "New Course" for the SED	135
The SED State's Crisis of Legitimacy: 17 June 1953	138

The Soviet Union Guarantees the Existence of the SED State	139
Western Initiatives for New Negotiations on Germany	140
Recognition and Stabilization of the GDR	142
CHAPTER 8
A Prelude to the Second Berlin Crisis: The SED Party Congress	145
The Fifth Party Congress of the SED, 1958	147
The Question of a Peace Treaty with Germany	148
Khrushchev Demands a Peace Agreement and a Solution to the Problem of West Berlin	149
SED Propaganda and the West Berlin Elections of 1958	151
CHAPTER 9
The Soviet Union's 1958 Berlin Ultimatum	154
A Bolt of Lightning: Khrushchev's Speech on 10 November 1958	154
Khrushchev's Motives	156
The Berlin Ultimatum	158
Multiple Reactions from the West	161
CHAPTER 10
Negotiations over a Peace Treaty and the "Free City of Westberlin"	165
Moscow Drafts	165
Ulbricht's Plans: Full Sovereignty and a Solution to the "Westberlin Problem"	168
The Geneva Conference of Foreign Ministers, 1959	173
CHAPTER 11
The Second Berlin Crisis and a Shift in the Cold War	179
The International Character of the Second Berlin Crisis	179
The Soviet-Chinese Schism and the Position of the SED	181
Khrushchev's Trip to the United States in 1959	183
The Summit that Khrushchev Cut Short: Paris 1960	184
CHAPTER 12
Crisis in the GDR, Changes to the Border Regime, and Interzonal Trade	189
A Supply Crisis and the Exodus Movement from the GDR	189
Border Controls and Special Permits to Enter East Berlin	190
The Conflict over Interzonal Trade	193
Negotiations on Interzonal Trade	195
CHAPTER 13
Ulbricht: Resolve the "Westberlin Question" Now!	199
The Status Quo in Berlin before Khrushchev's Summit with President Kennedy	199
Ulbricht Pushes for a Solution to the "Westberlin Question," 1961	202
Khrushchev's Time Frame in March 1961	206

CHAPTER 14

The Vienna Summit, 1961: The Second Soviet Ultimatum	213
Moscow's Expectations before the Summit	213
Kennedy: Balancing Détente and an Assertion of the Western Positions	215
Confrontation at the Summit: Khrushchev's "Vienna Ultimatum"	216
The Outcome: A Policy of Force	218
The SED Reacts to Khrushchev's "Vienna Ultimatum"	221

CHAPTER 15

The Decision to Close the Sector Border in Berlin	225
"No One Has the Intention of Building a Wall"	225
Ulbricht Demands Closing the Sector Border in Berlin	228
Secrecy and Conspiratorial Communication	230
Kennedy's Three Essentials and Khrushchev's Response	233

CHAPTER 16

The Construction of the Berlin Wall, 1961:
Germany's Division Gains a Symbol	238
"They Will Feel Your Power!": Khrushchev and Ulbricht on the Wall's Construction	238
West Germany Is Superior: The GDR's Economic Crisis	242
Legitimizing the Border Closure through the Warsaw Pact	245
The Operation to Close the Border: Planning and Troop Deployment	248
13 August 1961: The Division of Berlin	254

PART III. THE END OF THE SECOND BERLIN CRISIS

CHAPTER 17

Negotiations, but No War!	269
13 August and the Berlin Crisis: Berlin—Bonn—Washington	269
Khrushchev and the German Question after the Construction of the Wall	276
Conflicting Positions among the Western Powers, and Kennedy's Decision to Negotiate	278

CHAPTER 18

A Wall in Berlin but No Peace Treaty with the GDR	284
Khrushchev Retracts His Ultimatum	284
Military Exercises for an Unwanted War over Berlin	287
Ulbricht Demands a Peace Treaty	292
The Confrontation of Tanks at Checkpoint Charlie in October 1961	296
Khrushchev Approves Strengthening the Border	303
Exploratory Discussions on a Berlin Settlement	306

Khrushchev's Change of Course: Negotiations, but No Agreement	314
CHAPTER 19
Repercussions for Germany and a Shift in Trouble Areas	325
Ulbricht and the New Situation	325
Adenauer's Conflict with Kennedy over the Transit Routes to West Berlin	330
Germany Policy, or the Importance of Holding On	335
From the Berlin Crisis to the Cuban Missile Crisis	337
Conclusion	341
Bibliography	349
Index of Persons	361