Contents

Martin Hilpert, Michael Rießler, Jan-Ola Östman, Christine Mertzlufft, Janet Duke
Introducing new trends in Nordic linguistic research — 1

Section 1: Language contact

Kurt Braunmüller
Competing tendencies in Germanic pronominal and deictic systems:
The most general principle will prevail — 11

Pavel losad
“Pitch accent” and prosodic structure in Scottish Gaelic:
Reassessing the role of contact — 28

Ari Páll Kristinsson and Amanda Hilmarsson-Dunn
Implications of language contact:
Evaluating the appropriateness of borrowings in written Icelandic — 55

John Weinstock
At the frontier: Sámi linguistics gets a boost from outside — 68

Section 2: Phonology

Natalia Kuznetsova
Two phonological rarities in Ingrian dialects — 91

Kristján Árnason
Analysing phonological variation in Faroese — 118

Section 3: Morphosyntax

Jeremy Bradley
Mari converb constructions – Interpretation and translation — 141

Ulla Stroh-Wollin
Han and hon – Anaphoric pronouns in Early Scandinavia — 162
Margrét Jónsdóttir
From accusative to dative (via nominative):
The case of fjölga ‘increase’ and fækka ‘decrease’ in Icelandic —— 181

Section 4: Syntax

Karl Erland Gadelii
A generative interpretation of Diderichsen’s positional grammar —— 205

Henrik Rosenkvist
Evidence for a syntactic Parameter at work in Ævdalian —— 224

Ida Larsson and Janne Bondi Johannessen
Embedded word order in Heritage Scandinavian —— 239

Section 5: Grammaticalization

Andres Karjus
Through the spyglass of synchrony:
Grammaticalization of the exterior space in the Eastern Circum-Baltic —— 267

Helle Metslang, Karl Pajusalu and Kulli Habicht
Conjunctive markers of polar questions in Estonian —— 283

Index —— 307