CONTENT

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

I. THEORY AND METHOD: DISCOURSE, NARRATIVE, IDENTITY

1. Anthropological linguistics
   1.1 Theoretical and analytical framework
   1.2 Anthropological linguistics as an approach to discourse

2. Discourse analysis: a focus on language use
   2.1 Communication units: speech act, utterance, genre
   2.2 Discourse as heteroglossia
   2.3 Labov’s personal experience narrative
   2.4 Dialogical narrative
   2.5 Narrative and identification
     2.5.1 Collective narrative

3. Narrative identity
   3.1 Ethnic narrative identity
   3.2 National narrative identity

II. THE SERBS IN HUNGARY: A MINORITY COMMUNITY

5. Oral history and historiography
   5.1 Legendary history: the settling
   5.2 Floating gap: from the settling through to the twentieth century
   5.3 Recent past: the emergence of Hungary as a nation-state in the twentieth century

6. The Serbian minority in Hungary and the status of its language
   6.1 Legal framework
     6.1.1 Diaspora
     6.1.2 National minority
     6.1.3 Minority legislation in Hungary

---

Bibliografische Informationen
digitalisiert durch

http://d-nb.info/1054014655
13 Linguistic construction of a common culture 256
  13.1 Narrative and habituality 257
  13.2 The collective narrative of a common culture: St Mark’s Day 259
14 Linguistic orientation toward the present and the future 270
  14.1 The ideological nuclei 271
  14.2 Nostalgic vs. counterdiscourses 273
  14.3 The perspectivation collective narrative of then/now 282
  14.4 The temporal perspectivation then/now 283

V Discourse and ethnic identity: conclusion 285

Appendix: Tables with historiographic data 291

Table 1: Legendary history: the settling (14th–17th century) 291
Table 2: Floating gap: from the settling through to the twentieth century 293
Table 3: Recent past: the emergence of Hungary as a nation-state in the twentieth century 297

List of references 303

Index 333