Contents

Chapter One: Traveller’s Tales, Textbook Research and Theory Development .............................................................. 25

Chapter Two: Possibilities and Choices: Reflections on the Literature ........................................................................... 39

Chapter Three: The Philosophical Basis of Comparisons I – From the Modernist ‘Thesis’ to the Postmodern ‘Antithesis’ ......................................................... 69

Chapter Four: The Philosophical Basis of Comparisons II – Towards a Hermeneutic ‘Synthesis’ ........................................... 105

Chapter Five: Hermeneutic Readings of Past Masters I – Re-interpreting Bereday’s Emphasis on the Importance of Language and Contextual Immersion Using Gadamer ......................................................... 147

Chapter Six: Hermeneutic Readings of Past Masters II – Isolating and Approaching Educational Contexts through a Re-interpretation of the Brian Holmes / Edmund King Dialectic ................................. 171

Chapter Seven: Charting a Syllabus Topic in History Education across Cultures – The Descriptive Exercise of Constellation Mapping ............................ 199

Chapter Eight: Comparative Constellation Analysis as Method ......................................................... 265

Chapter Nine: Conclusion – Labour, Consciousness and Agency ......................................................... 285

Index  ........................................................................................................................................................................... 289