“The chemical industry on a global scale is lagging in outsourcing compared to other industries”, says Hans-Jörg Bertschi in an interview.

Combating the acute shortage of drivers requires more than just individual measures for job profile improvement or new training regulations.

Partners from politics, industry and academia worked together in the project "Chemlog T&T" to improve intermodal transport in Eastern Europe.

"The chemical industry on a global scale is lagging in outsourcing compared to other industries”, says Hans-Jörg Bertschi in an interview.

Combating the acute shortage of drivers requires more than just individual measures for job profile improvement or new training regulations.

Partners from politics, industry and academia worked together in the project "Chemlog T&T" to improve intermodal transport in Eastern Europe.

“The chemical industry on a global scale is lagging in outsourcing compared to other industries”, says Hans-Jörg Bertschi in an interview.

Combating the acute shortage of drivers requires more than just individual measures for job profile improvement or new training regulations.

Partners from politics, industry and academia worked together in the project "Chemlog T&T" to improve intermodal transport in Eastern Europe.