Contents

Preface to the English edition xi

Preface to the German edition xiii

1 Indication for treatment and the contract 1

2 Understanding, observing, interpreting 4
   1 The path of understanding 4
   2 The path of observing 6
   3 The path of interpreting 6

3 Three theoretical models of psychoanalytic group therapy 8
   1 Therapy of the individual in the group 8
   2 Therapy of the group through the group with the individual's participation 9
   3 The two-dimensional model of psychoanalytic group therapy 10

4 The first session of Group 1 12
   1 Sequence of events 12
   2 Theoretical considerations 15

5 Hatred and love between the sexes: continuation of the process in Group 1 17
   1 Hatred of the strict and rejecting mother 17
   2 Eroticism between the sexes 20

6 Resistance and defence in psychoanalytic group therapy 22
   1 Resistance arising from shame, guilt and anxiety 22
   2 Resistance and repetition compulsion 24
Contents

3 An example of group defence 26
4 Theoretical perspective 28

7 Transference in psychoanalytic group therapy, exemplified by Group 2 32
1 Transference by the individual to another individual 32
2 Group transference 33
3 Family transference and idealizing transference 36

8 The struggle with authority. Subsequent course of the group process in Group 2 38
1 The fight for the father 38
2 Vengeance on the disappointing father 40
3 Symbolic killing of the father and reparation 41

9 The group process: each individual participates in shared events 44
1 The group process seen through the three-layers-model 44
2 The narcissism-theory of the group 46
3 The segment-theory of the group 46
4 Four levels of transference in the layers-model 48
5 Initial phase, main phase and end phase of the group process 50

10 Early mother-child relationship in the group: split into good and bad 51
1 Destruction and reparation 51
2 Envy of the mother who possesses everything 53
3 Splitting processes in Group 3 53
4 The borderline-theory of the group 55

11 Self-destruction of a group or the result of constructive separations? 58
1 Anarchy and chaos in Group 3 58
2 ‘I am afraid of every person!’ 59
3 Testing to destruction 61
4 A group’s agony 65
5 Theoretical retrospect 66

12 Sexuality and the Oedipus complex in the group 69
1 Men help women to become women and women help
men to become men

2 The precondition of mature sexual relations: overcoming the Oedipus complex

3 The Oedipus complex re-enacted in the here and now

4 Homosexuality in the group

5 Escape into dependence or fight for independence?

13 Aggressiveness in the group

1 Various forms and kinds of aggressiveness

2 Aggression in the family, narcissistic rage and primitive destructiveness

14 The conductor's function

1 The influence of the conductor's technique on the group process

2 The influence of the group process on the conductor's technique

3 The individual participant's influence

4 The conductor's counter-transference

5 The conductor's own transference to the group

15 The relationship between individuals, the psychoanalyst and the group

1 The level of the working relationship

2 The relationship between individuals, the psychoanalyst and the group when a participant is in distress

3 The relationship between individuals, the psychoanalyst and the group when early childhood sexuality is reactivated — the perspective of the psychosis-model

4 The relationship between individuals, the psychoanalyst, and the group when childhood narcissism is reactivated — the perspective of the narcissism-theory of the group

5 The relationship between individuals, the psychoanalyst, and the group when early childhood aggressiveness is reactivated — the perspective of the borderline-theory of the group

6 The relationship between individuals, the psychoanalyst, and the group and the participants' ability to be members of the group — the perspective of the family-model

16 The end phase of the group process
Contents

1. Fundamental theoretical considerations 101
2. The end phase of Group 2 104
3. The end phase of Group 1 107

17. After group therapy has ended 111

1. Advantages of a concentrated individual therapy subsequent to group therapy 111
2. Outcome of psychoanalytic group therapy 112
3. A concluding remark 113

Notes 114

Index 123