Table of Contents

About the Editors ........................................................................................................... ix

Introduction, by Bic Ngo ................................................................................................. 1

Part I. Contesting Authoritative Discourses in Education

Chapter One: Paying with Their Lives: One Family and the School-to-Prison Pipeline, by Joe Lewis and Letitia Basford ................................................................. 9

Chapter Two: Why Social Justice Educators Must Engage Science in All of Our Classrooms, by Jane L. Lehr .......................................................... 25

A Teaching Story: Academic Writing and the Silence of Oppression, by Linda Fernsten ................................................................. 45

Conversation: Contesting Authoritative Discourses in Education, by Letitia Basford, Linda Fernsten, Jane L. Lehr, and Joe Lewis ....................... 55

Part II. Unearthing Hidden Curriculums: Developmentalism, Race, and Laughter

Chapter Three: Disposable Young Mothers: Desettling Developmentalism, Unmasking Waste and Value Production in Education, by Erin Dyke and Jana LoBello ................................................................. 69

Chapter Four: Raced Curriculum: Asian American College Students’ Lives, by Candace J. Chow ................................................................. 85
A Teaching Story: Unsilencing Laughter in Serious Spaces, by Sarah E. Hansen .......................................................... 99 Conversation: Unearthing Hidden Curricula: Standards, Socialization, and Silences, by Candace J. Chow, Erin Dyke, Sarah E. Hansen, and Jana LoBello .......................................................... 109

Part III. Learning to Read Critically: From High School to College to Teacher Education
Chapter Five: Studying Media Representations to Foster Critical
Literacy, by Jill Ewing Flynn .................................................. 119
Chapter Six: Ways of Reading, Ways of Seeing: Social Justice Inquiry in the Literature Classroom, by Mary Beth Hines ....................... 135
A Teaching Story: Anti-Oppressive Pedagogy and Curriculum in Secondary English Methods: Focusing on Critical Literacy, by Jocelyn Anne Glazier .................................................... 153
Conversation: Learning to Read Critically, by Jill Ewing Flynn, Jocelyn
Anne Glazier, and Mary Beth Hines ..................................... 161

Part IV. Addressing Resistance: Uncertainties in Learning to Teach Chapter Seven: Disrupting “Neutrality” and the New Racism in Teacher Education, by Ann Mogush Mason .......................... 171
Chapter Eight: Putting Anti-Oppressive Language Teacher Education
in Practice, by Mary Curran .................................................. 187
A Teaching Story: Reflections upon Racism and Schooling from Kindergarten to College, by Ann Berlak and Sekani Moyenda ........ 203
Conversation: Addressing Resistance: Uncertainties in Learning to Teach, by Ann Berlak, Mary Curran, Ann Mogush
Mason, and Sekani Moyenda ............................................. 217

Part V. Complicating Race and Racism in Theory and Practice
Chapter Nine: Going Against the Grain: Higher Education
Practitioners Countering Neoliberalism and Post-Racial Ideology, by Sumun Lakshmi Pendakur .................................. 227
Chapter Ten: “Khmerican” and Lao American Youths’ Contested Ethnic Identities: Perspectives That Move Teachers Beyond Race, by Phitsamay Sychitkokhong Uy ........................................ 245
A Teaching Story: It Begins with Muffins for Moms: How Racist Practices
Casually Creep into Classrooms, by Mary E. Lee-Nichols ................ 263
Conversation: Complicating Race and Racism in Theory and Practice, by Mary E. Lee-Nichols, Sumun Lakshmi Pendakur, and Phitsamay Sychitkokhong Uy ............................................. 273
Part VI. Situating Anti-Oppressive Education in Our Times

Chapter Eleven: Teaching in a Time of War and the Metaphor of Two Worlds, by George Lipsitz ................................................................. 283
Chapter Twelve: From Individualism to Interconnectedness: Exploring the Transformational Potential of a Community-Generated Methodology, by Brian D. Lozenski and Gevonee EuGene Ford ............... 291
Conversation: Situating Anti-Oppressive Education in Our Times, by George Lipsitz, Brian D. Lozenski, and Gevonee EuGene Ford ............... 311
Afterword to the Second Edition: Against Losing Pedagogy, by Kevin K. Kumashiro ................................................................. 319

Index ........................................................................................................ 321