Table of Contents

1. Introduction: “Loss has Become the New Sublime”
   - 2.1 The Development of a Genre
   - 2.2 Changes of Form and Content
   - 2.3 The English Elegy
   - 2.4 The New Anti-Consolatory Elegy: Thomas Hardy
   - 2.5 The Issue of Consolation
   - 2.6 Elegies in Times of War

2. “A Form without Frontiers”: Genre and Elegiac Mood
   - 2.1 The Development of a Genre
   - 2.2 Changes of Form and Content
   - 2.3 The English Elegy
   - 2.4 The New Anti-Consolatory Elegy: Thomas Hardy
   - 2.5 The Issue of Consolation
   - 2.6 Elegies in Times of War

3. The Post-War and Contemporary Elegy
   - 3.1 The End of Consolation: The Anti-Elegy or the Anti-Consolatory Elegy
   - 3.2 Melancholy as a Symptom of the 20th and 21st Centuries
   - 3.3 The Anti-Consolatory Elegy
   - 3.4 Political Use: The Contemporary Medicalized Elegy
   - 3.5 The Effects of the Changing Genre

4. Defining Poetry: Theoretical Approaches
   - 4.1 Problems in Defining Poetry
   - 4.2 Theories of Poetry
   - 4.3 The Transgeneric versus the Conventional Approach
   - 4.4 Autobiography and the Elegy