Contents

Acknowledgements..................................................................................................................11

About the authors......................................................................................................................13

List of tables and figures..........................................................................................................17

Recognised by whom? Insights on research considerations, by Tatiana Chemi and Julie Borup Jensen..........................................................................................................19

Part One: Creativity and Art, by Tatiana Chemi......................................................................31

Chapter 1: Artistic creativity: past, present and future............................................................33
   Etymology and definition(s)...................................................................................................33
   History of a concept...............................................................................................................34
   The arts and creativity..........................................................................................................39
   Creativity studies today.......................................................................................................44

Chapter 2: Artists defining creativity.......................................................................................55
   Meeting definitional challenges.........................................................................................55
   Art: word and value............................................................................................................56
   What creativity is for artists...............................................................................................59
   Creativity as compulsion to make art................................................................................62
   Creativity as artistic identity.............................................................................................66
   The ineffable business........................................................................................................67
   Embodied meaning............................................................................................................68
   Propositional and presentational.......................................................................................71
   Art as language in a new key.............................................................................................74
   Art as creative ex-pression...............................................................................................78

Chapter 3: Artistic process and composition.........................................................................83
   Before the storm: preparing for creation over a lifetime....................................................85
   The lifelong creative project...............................................................................................88
Inspiration
Preparing for the creation of artworks .......................................................... 91
Intentional exposure to experiences .............................................................. 94
Stealing: dialogue or fight with models ......................................................... 96
Sweeping up the creative space ..................................................................... 98
Getting to work: engaging the idea-reservoir .............................................. 100
Virtuosity ........................................................................................................ 101
In dialogue with the medium .......................................................................... 104
Rules ................................................................................................................ 106
The art of making art ....................................................................................... 109

Chapter 4: Artistic emotions and ways of thinking ............................................. 113
When the work is done .................................................................................... 119
Emotions in the making .................................................................................. 122
Positive emotions ............................................................................................ 124
Artists in flow .................................................................................................. 127
Negative emotions ........................................................................................... 129
Bridging positive and negative ...................................................................... 133
Motivation, resilience and persistence .......................................................... 136
Art-making as discovery and research ........................................................... 141

Part Two: Learning and Change, by Julie Borup Jensen ............................... 147

Chapter 5: Creativity and elements of learning and change ......................... 149
Creativity, learning and the arts ...................................................................... 149
Why associate the concepts of learning and creativity? ............................... 150
Experience, action and learning within the arts ............................................. 150
Action, community and creativity .................................................................. 152
Cognition, arts and learning ........................................................................... 152
Socio-cultural dimensions in learning ........................................................... 156
Tools and meaning-making in the arts ............................................................ 156
Determinism and spontaneity ........................................................................ 157
Culturalism and creativity .............................................................................. 159
Domains and the creative process .................................................................. 160
Aesthetic learning and senses in learning processes ..................................... 162
Learning and creativity as intertwined and interwoven. .............................. 165
Chapter 6: Creativity and ways of building knowledge and skills

Learning purposes, goals and strategies in artistic work
Adequate expression: technical skills, craftsmanship and the body
Without technique, creative ideas die
Practicing as a learning strategy
Continual learning: how to creatively renew artistic expression
Challenging oneself as a learning strategy
Changing perspectives of meaning as a learning strategy
Impossibilities and obstruction
Challenge as a strategy for continual learning and creativity
Feeling lost: disorientation, crises and frustration in learning
Open engagement with the world
Curiosity killed the cat – but not learning
The reflective practitioner – a curious practitioner
Practice, challenge, curiosity and improvisation

Chapter 7: Creativity, learning and apprenticeship

Apprenticeship and the situated understanding of learning
Shared work, distributed learning
Non-verbal learning opportunities
Meaning-making and art
Mutual learning and own uniqueness
Formal education, schools, conformity and uniqueness
Teachers, educators, other masters and opportunities for learning
What can the educational field learn from the artists’ narratives?

Chapter 8: Perspectives for learning in educational settings

What is at stake in formal learning settings?
Daring to be deliberately stupid
What is serendipity?
Enticing learners
Restrospective appreciation
Prepared mind: the unique and special meets the conformist and common
Serendipity in the classroom
Evaluation – how to evaluate unexpected knowledge?