Contents

Robert Wilkinson and Mary Louise Walsh
Introduction ............................................................................................................. 9

Section 1: Keynote addresses

Cecilia Jacobs
Mapping the terrains of ICLHE: A view from the south ........................................... 21

François Grin
Foreign language skills, “linguistic work” and the economic theory of value ........... 39

Section 2: Policies

Slobodanka Dimová and Joyce Kling
Lecturers’ English proficiency and university language policies for quality assurance ............................................................................................................. 61

Inmaculada Fortanet-Gómez
The implementation of a multilingual language policy in a time of economic restrictions ............................................................................................................. 75

Frank van Splunder
A tale of two countries: Diverging policies on English-medium instruction in the Netherlands and Flanders ............................................................................................................. 89

Section 3: Frameworks and Design

Saeed Aburizaizah
Introducing content and language-integrated learning at a Saudi Arabian university ............................................................................................................. 101
Margaret Franken
Resituation: A framework for understanding the complexities of becoming a researcher in an unfamiliar context ........................................... 117

Magnus Gustafsson, Jessica Dagman, Jonas Fredriksson, Rasmus Rempling
Student and supervisor interpretation of generic criteria for specific engineering projects ................................................................. 133

Carrie Kilfoil and Bruce Horner
Beyond “English-only” in U.S. writing instruction: Fostering translingual dispositions in writing teacher education .............................................. 149

Kris Van de Poel and Tobie van Dyk
Discipline-specific academic literacy and academic integration ................................................................. 161

Elisabeth Wielander
ICL in UK tertiary education: The case of German ........................................................................... 181

Alysse Weinberg, Jérémie Séror, Hélène Knoerr, & Sandra Burger
Lessons learned from implementing French immersion studies program at the University of Ottawa ............................................. 195

Section 4: Integration

Anton Ledergerber
Teaching business presentation skills – A heuristic case study ........................................... 223

William Sherlaw, Kasia Czabanowska and Mark Thompson
English for public health teaching within the context of internationalisation in France ........................................................................... 239

Dietmar Tatzl
Support measures for content teaching embedded in a tertiary English-medium degree programme ........................................... 255
Section 5: Competences

Karin Richter
EMI and pronunciation – Outline of a longitudinal case study.................. 275

Patrick Studer
Linguistic competence in undergraduate science teaching:
A student perspective........................................................... 291

Miriam Symon and Linda Weinberg
Introducing EMI instruction in an EFL context: Can the integration of content and language in higher education improve students’
English proficiency? ............................................................. 309

Jennifer Valcke and Victor Pávon
A comparative study on the use of pronunciation strategies for highlighting information in university lectures ................................ 323