Contents

1. Introduction ........................................................................................................................................1
2. ICDC – its mission, history, professors and students, some CVs and figures ......................................................... 5
3. 20 Interviews with former students from Africa, Asia, Latin America and other parts of the world ......................... 29
   3.1. Africa: Berko, Chukwu, Elnaiem, Kamdem, Kibora, Minishi, Mwirumubi, Mbepera, Ndjonkou, Ouedraogo, Owojuigbe ................................................................. 30
   3.2. Asia: Janius, Jeon, Mulyana, Sa Da’noer .......................................................... 113
   3.3. Latin America: Bellafont, Sarmiento Reyes ..................................................... 127
   3.4. Australia / Mauritius: Rhungapen ........................................................................ 137
   3.5. USA / Sudan: Bakhit ....................................................................................... 143
   3.6. Germany / Uganda: Ruhweza ............................................................................ 147
   3.7. Summary of the interviews .................................................................................. 150
   3.8. Note by Hans-H. Münkner on a visit of Shanghai and Xi’an, October 14-18, 2007 .................................................. 153
4. Texts sent to the editor together with answers to the questionnaire .............................................................................. 155
   4.1. Berko: The expansionist trend of influence of the Institute for Co-operation in Developing Countries, Marburg, along the West Coast of Africa .......................... 155
   4.2. Rhungapen: To prove that knowledge acquired in Marburg during his studies is still present after working for more than 20 years in a different occupation. .............. 178
5. What became of the Degree Course in Co-operative Economics of Philipps-University, Marburg (1964-2000) and its graduates?
   Excerpts of an interview with Prof. Dr. Hans-H. Münkner by Nadine Henseler on 20 June, 2007 .............................................. 187
6. The Making of International Co-operative Promoters .............................................................................................. 205
7. Summary and conclusion ............................................................................................................................................... 225