3. Pearl Buck’s Coming of Age: East Wind, West Wind | 133
Pearl Buck’s Rise on the American Literary Scene and the Publication Background of East Wind, West Wind | 136
The Style and Narrative Perspective of East Wind, West Wind | 144
The Missionary Husband and the Practice of Footbinding | 150

4. Reversing the Middlebrow: The Good Earth | 163
The Marketing and Reception of The Good Earth | 167
The Good Earth as a Depression Novel | 177
The Iconicity of O-lan | 183

5. China/Town Hybridity and (Neo-) Missionary Nostalgia: “His Own Country” and Kinfolk | 199
“His Own Country” – The Return to One’s ‘Roots’? | 202
‘Showing what it is to be Chinese’: Staging China/Town in Kinfolk | 210
The ‘Elegant Fake’: Enter Dr Liang | 213
“We must show this vast new country what it is to be Chinese”: Dr Liang as an ‘Old’ Missionary | 216
‘Dissolving the Beautiful Cloud of Confucianism’: The Neo-Missionaries in China | 222
‘Belonging to all of them’: Mrs Liang and the Promise of Hybridity? | 229

6. Coda: “We haven’t deserted Him exactly, we just haven't known how to fit Him in.” The Missionary Legacy in Pearl Buck and her Fiction | 231

Works Cited | 265