

Contents

About the Author	vii
Introduction	viii
Chapter 1. Meeting in the Petri Dish?	1
Reproductive Medicine between Exigency and Engineered Normality.....	1
The Child as a Product: The Logic of Engineering	6
The Logic of Depersonalization.....	15
Social Egg Freezing: Family Planning on Ice.....	19
Alternatives to Engineered Reproduction.....	26
Chapter 2. Screen, Test, Weed Out?	31
The Double-Edged Sword of Prenatal Diagnostics	31
Is the Handicapped Child an Avoidable Risk?	39
The Gray Area between Demand and Taboo: Abortion	52
Chapter 3. Prettier, Better, Stronger?	62
Why Do We Want to Optimize Everything?.....	62
Endangering the Good Life.....	68
Conditions for a Good Life	74
Chapter 4. Is Health a Duty?	86
Personal Responsibility Is the New Paradigm	86
Is Sickness Guilt?.....	93
Health Literacy Is More Attitude than Knowledge	98

Chapter 5. The Crisis of Confidence in Organ Donation.....	104
Conditions for Confidence	105
Is Brain Death the Death of the Person?	111
An Approach to Humane Transplant Medicine.....	116
Chapter 6. On the Value of Age, Beyond the Fitness Imperative	124
“So That the Arc of Life May Be Complete”	125
Age Is a Clear View of Reality.....	129
The Relation of Dependency	132
Chapter 7. Living Wills - Are Forms Replacing Dialogue?.....	138
The Living Will	138
Autonomy and Care.....	142
Forms Cannot Substitute Relationships.....	145
Chapter 8. Being Able to Let Go. For a New Culture of Dying.....	151
“Self-Determined Death”—Active Euthanasia Is Ethical Resignation	152
The Rationalization of Death and the Question of “Meaning”	158
What Could Good Dying Look Like?	166
Epilogue: Happiness Lies in Our Attitude Toward the World	172
Medicine of Prudence.....	173
Where Is the Yardstick?	177
Medicine and the Question of the Good Life.....	178
The Chance of Inner Healing Power	181
Notes	184
Index.....	189