

List of Tables	xv
Foreword	xvii
Preface	xxi
Acknowledgments	xxiii
List of Abbreviations	xxvii
Glossary	xxx i
Notes to the Reader	xxxv
Quotations from the Bible and the Qur'an	xxxv
Emphasis and quotation marks	xxxv
Translation and transliteration	xxxvi
Chapters, sub-chapters, and sections	xxxvi
Chapter One: Introduction	1
General introduction	1
Literature review	3
Research questions and clarifications	5
Unit of analysis and research questions	5
Clarification of central concepts	6
The Joint Committee as a diapraxis initiative	7

Theoretical perspectives	10
Religious leadership	11
Religious identity	12
Religion and politics	12
Research design and structure	14
Chapter Two: Method and Material	22
Missiology as the disciplinary framework	22
Critical realism as the epistemological assumption	24
Abduction as the main research strategy	26
Research material	27
Observation material	27
Interview material	28
Archival material	28
Unpublished material	29
Public material	29
Situatedness of the researcher	29
Simultaneously insider and outsider	30
New situation: From missionary to researcher	34
Violence influencing Zanzibar at the time of the fieldwork	35
Changing political circumstances influencing researcher's positionality	36
Production of material	37
Before the interviews	37
Conduct of interviews	38
Observation material produced by me	39
Texts composed by me	40
Reliability of the material	41
Analyzing the material	43
Ethical considerations	44
Conclusion: Quality of the research	44
Part One: The Historical Development in Zanzibar 1612–2013	57
Chapter Three: A Historical Introduction to Christian-Muslim
Relations in Zanzibar	59
Zanzibar and Christian-Muslim relations 1612–1957	59
Islam and Christianity arriving on the Swahili coast	59
The Sultan and the churches	60
The end of slavery	61
Becoming a protectorate	62
Muslim religious leaders in Zanzibar	63

Christian education and Bishop Frank Weston	65
Towards a more turbulent period	67
Zanzibar between 1957 and 1992	68
Turbulent times	68
Zanzibar in the United Republic of Tanzania	73
Greater integration in the union and beyond	77
From 1992: Multipartyism reintroduced	78
Disputed elections	78
Troubles in 2012–2013	80
Interpreting the violence	81
Conversion: A key issue in Christian-Muslim relations	84
Causes of changes in Christian-Muslim relations	86
Summary of the historical chapter: Lessons learnt	88
Chapter Four: The Joint Committee of Religious Leaders for Peace in Zanzibar: The Journey, 2005–2013	109
Enabling preconditions and preparations	109
Historical precedents	109
The Lutheran and missionary components	111
Missio Dei as theological justification	113
Enabling preconditions	115
Breakthrough and preparations	117
The WCRP and PROCURA approaches: Considerations concerning autonomy and context	118
Establishing the committee	121
Making the case for Christian-Muslim cooperation for peace in Zanzibar	122
The founding meetings and the founding document	125
The committee at work	126
The first test: The 2005 elections	126
Expanding the scope: Establishing local peace committees	129
The committee members' understanding of their own role as religious leaders	135
The inner workings of the committee	137
Engaging beyond Zanzibar	142
Developments after 2010	144
Impact	146
Contributing to peaceful elections and perhaps inspiring the coalition government	147
Reasons for the Joint Committee's impact	148

Part Two: Key Theological Issues at Stake	173
Chapter Five: Religious Identity	175
Religious identity	175
Belonging to it: The communal character of religious identity	176
Believing it: The role of theology in religious identity	176
Performing it: The role of enactment in religious identity	177
Interreligious cooperation understood as mixing religions	177
The accusations	178
Refutation	180
Islam and Christianity as distinct and different religions	184
Complexities of lived religion	187
‘Ecumenical religion’ and ‘elite religion’	187
‘Popular religion’ in Zanzibar	189
Intertwining of multiple identities	193
Religious identities in interreligious cooperation	196
The PROCMURA approach	196
Acknowledging religious difference	201
Conclusion: The reality and dignity of difference	204
Chapter Six: Religion and Politics	218
Navigating the interface between religion and politics	218
Engaging the political sphere as religious leaders	218
Retaining the distance while maintaining a cooperational approach	220
The accusations of mixing religion and politics	223
Bearing marks for the navigation	225
Politicization of religion and religionization of politics	226
Three models for state-religion relations in Zanzibar	229
Conclusion: Engaging for peace and peaceful coexistence	234
Chapter Seven: Conclusion: Diapraxis as the way forward	241
Whither diapraxis	241
Unity is strength, division is weakness	242
Peace as the unifying goal	247
Peace as a joint project	250
Diapraxis as witness	251
Diapraxis as a way of life	253
Appendices	261
Timelines	261
Appendix I: Timeline 1612–2000	261
Appendix II: Timeline 2001–2013	267

Interview appendices	269
Appendix III: Invitation to participate in a research project	269
Appendix IV: Interview guide	270
Appendix V: Full list of public dialogue meetings 2005–2010	271
Committee guidelines appendices	274
Appendix VI: Muongozo [original Swahili version of the Guidelines: English translation in the next appendix]	274
Appendix VII: Guidelines for local committees	276
Primary Sources	279
A: Observation material	279
Notes from committee meetings	279
Notes from public dialogue meetings	280
Other observation material	280
B: Interview material	280
Transcribed field study interviews	280
Other interviews	281
C: Archival material	281
Zanzibar National Archives	281
Archives of the Congregation of the Holy Ghost, Chevilly Larue, Paris	281
UMCA Archives, Rhodes House, Oxford	282
D: Unpublished material	282
Joint committee material	282
Newsletters	285
Correspondence	285
Other unpublished material	286
Bibliography	289
Scriptural references	309
Biblical	309
Qur'anic	309
Index	311