

Table of Contents

Acknowledgments	7
1. Introduction	11
1.1 Alexander the Great and the British Empire: Classical Reception in Context	16
1.2 Travel Writing as a Mode of Classical Reception	28
1.3 The Reception of Alexander between Cultural Memory and Cultural Encounter	32
1.4 Summary of the Chapters	41
2. Setting the Stage	46
2.1 Major James Rennell, Geography, and the Mapping of Alexander's Indian Conquest	51
2.2 The Memory of Alexander Between Enlightenment Philosophy and Geopolitics in Napoleonic Times	62
2.3 Diplomatic Missions and the First Explorations Beyond the 'Frontier'	75
2.4 The Next Generation of Trans-Frontier Exploration and the Russian Threat	91
3. Romancing Alexander	99
3.1 Afghanistan, Imagination, and the Imitation of Alexander the Great	103
3.2 Up the Indus and Through Afghanistan: Sir Alexander Burnes in the Footsteps of Alexander the Great – The Identities of Places and People	111
3.3 'General' Josiah Harlan's Reception of Alexander the Great: The Macedonian as Political and Personal Model	129
3.4 "The Man Who Would Be King" and the Cultural Imagination of Imperial Aspirations Fashioned on the Reception of Alexander the Great	144

4. The Material Fabrics of Memory and the Possession of the Past	153
4.1 Early Explorers and the Beginnings of Indo-Afghan Archaeology.....	158
4.2 The Case of Charles Masson.....	165
4.3 Alexander Cunningham and the Archaeological Survey of India.....	181
4.4 Sir Aurel Stein on Alexander's Tracks.....	193
4.5 The Legacy of Colonial Archaeology.....	208
5. Contested Memories and Collective Identities	216
5.1 The Military Aspects of Alexander's Memory along the North-West Frontier.....	221
5.2 Alexander's Descendants: Colonial Ethnography and the Strange Case of the Kafirs.....	237
5.3 Thomas Hungerford Holdich, Alexander's Memory, and the Political Geography of Empire.....	251
5.4 Coming Full Circle: Holdich and the Memory of Frontier Exploration from Alexander to the British Empire.....	267
6. Epilogue	272
List of Figures	282
Bibliography	283
Ancient Texts (Editions, Commentaries, Translations).....	283
Primary Sources.....	284
Modern Studies.....	292
Map of Alexander's Campaign	303
Index	305