

Contents

Acknowledgements	9
Publications included in the thesis	11
Introduction:
Monuments of Architecture, Monuments of Architectural History	15
Relevance to society at large: Heritage, power and the 'long nineteenth century'	18
Journey and objectives: Reflections of identity via monuments	24
Protagonists and sources, those written monuments	26
Key concepts and method: A historiography of heritage	31
I: Art history and heritage studies	35
II: Localism and nationalism	44
III: Baltic and German, Heimat and diaspora	51
Relevance to the academia: From 'the rise of history' to 'the rise of heritage'	58
Structure: From image to word to practice	64

1. Baltic Heritage and Picturesque Ruins.

Visual Art as a Means of 'Inventing' the Local

Introduction

Ruins in Baltic German art

The power of the image

Baltic provinces in word and image: Albums of sights

Reflections on the Baltic identity: Motives behind the choice of motifs

To document or to romanticise?

St Olaf's church in Tallinn: A case study

Conclusion

2. Art History in Nineteenth-Century Estonia?

Scholarly Endeavours in the Context of an Emerging Discipline

Introduction

Art history as a university discipline

History of Baltic art: An initiative of learned societies?

History vs. art history: First monographs on local heritage

Publications praised for professionalism

Wilhelm Neumann as the 'father of Baltic art history'?

Conclusions

3. Baltic Identity via German Heritage?

Seeking Baltic German Art in the Nineteenth Century

Introduction

Histories of local art

Baltic or German heritage?

Baltic nature – Baltic character

Colonial nature of Baltic heritage?

German, Baltic German and Estonian art history

Conclusion

4. Monuments as a Responsibility:

Baltic German Learned Societies and the Construction of Cultural Heritage around 1900

Introduction

Learned societies with a patriotic agenda

Popularization as a romantic and enlightenment ideal: 1888

Popularization arising out of necessity: 1906

Reworking identities in collective undertakings

Popularization as a form of professional practice: 1911

Conclusions: Nationalism in the Baltic German context

5. Heritage, Patrimony or Legacy?

Baltic German and Estonian Cultural Dialectic in Facing the Local Past

Introduction

Different material cultures and one's 'own' heritage

Baltic German 'high' art: Unwanted heritage?

Reconciliation with an 'alien' heritage

Conclusions

Main Results and Conclusions:

Heritage, Heimat and Nationalism in Art Historiography 245

Summary: Saksa mälestised ja Balti Heimat. Pärandi historiograafia „pikal 19. sajandil“ 265

Appendix 1: Published Estonian full text of art. 1

Appendix 2: Published Estonian summary of art. 2

Bibliography 325

Illustration details 363

Curriculum vitae 364