

Contents

Laurence Horn

Introduction: On lying and disleading — 1

I Lies and deception: The landscape of falsehood

Thomas L. Carson

Lying, deception, and related concepts: A conceptual map for ethics — 15

William G. Lycan

The morality of deception — 41

Roy Sorensen

Kant tell an a priori lie — 65

II Lying, deception, and speaker commitment: Empirical evidence

Alex Wiegmann, Neele Engelmann

Is lying morally different from misleading? An empirical investigation — 89

Ronny Boogaart, Henrike Jansen, Maarten van Leeuwen

“I was only quoting”: Shifting viewpoint and speaker commitment — 113

Marta Dynel

Memefying deception and deceptive memefication: Multimodal deception on social media — 139

III Puffery, bluffery, bullshit: How to not quite lie

Tim Kenyon, Jennifer Saul

Bald-faced bullshit and authoritarian political speech: Making sense of Johnson and Trump — 165

VIII — Contents

Laurence Horn

Practice to deceive: A natural history of the legal bluff — 195

Elisabeth Camp

Just saying, just kidding: Liability for accountability-avoiding speech in ordinary conversation, politics and law — 227

IV Crossing the perjury threshold: Deceit and falsehood in the courtroom

Roger W. Shuy

Perjury cases and the linguist — 261

Saul Kassin

Trickery and deceit: How the pragmatics of interrogation leads innocent people to confess – and factfinders to believe their confessions — 289

Izabela Skoczeń, Aleksander Smywiński-Pohl

The context of mistrust: Perjury ascriptions in the courtroom — 309

Benjamin Weissman

What counts as a lie in and out of the courtroom? The effect of discourse genre on lie judgments — 353

Lawrence M. Solan

Lies, deception, and bullshit in law — 381

Index — 409