Contents

Introduction: Crossing the Channel – British-German Historical and Cultural Dialogues
   By Rudolf Boch, Marian Nebelin, Cecile Sandten ....................... 1

Notes on British-German Perspectives on Johann Joachim Winckelmann’s Alleged Homosexuality
   By Till S. Kronsfoth ................................................................. 15

The Old English Materials of Northern German Scholars and the Dictionarium Saxonico-Latinum of John Joscelyn and John Parker –
A Preliminary Study
   By Melanie Vollbrecht .............................................................. 21

Lavater’s Physiognomies and Feuerbach’s Concept of Projection in George Eliot’s Middlemarch
   By Eike Kronshage ................................................................. 49

Misplaced Politeness and Anglo-German Racial Thought: Charles White, Edward Holme, and the Account of the Regular Gradation in Man (1799)
   By Andrew Wells ........................................................................ 73

From ‘Hereditary Greatness’ to Biopolitics: An Anglo-German History of Twin Research
   By Wieland Schwanebeck .......................................................... 99

Mediating European Culture in the Age of Nationalism – the Liberal Catholic Historian Lady Charlotte Blennerhassett (1843–1917)
   By Laura Pachtner ...................................................................... 115

A Garden of One’s Own: Female Self-Enunciation through Enacting an English Garden in Germany – Elizabeth von Arnim’s ‘Garden Novels’
   By Cecile Sandten ................................................................. 149

List of Names .................................................................................. 165
List of Places .................................................................................. 170