

Table of Contents

Chapter 1

Trends in Cigarette Consumption and the Sociodemographic Structure of the Smoking Population in Developed Industrial Countries		1
1.1	Trends in Cigarette Consumption in the USA and the Member Countries of the European Community	2
1.1.1	Development of Cigarette Consumption	2
1.1.2	Changes in the Size of the Smoking Population	3
1.1.3	Trends in Consumption with Regard to the Most Favoured Types of Cigarette	5
1.1.4	Summary	8
1.2	A Critical Look at Available Data on the Sociodemographic Structure of the Smoking Population in West Germany	9
1.3	The Sociodemographic Structure of the Smoking Population of West Germany	11
1.3.1	Average Consumption	11
1.3.2	Age Distribution	12
1.3.3	Educational Status	13
1.3.4	Occupation	16
1.3.5	Income	17
1.3.6	Summary	17
	Notes	18

Chapter 2

Why Do Smokers Smoke? A Survey of the Various Approaches to the Question of Smoker Motivation		23
2.1	The Genetic Approach	24
2.2	The Physiological Approach: Smoking as an Addiction	25
2.3	The Psychological Approach	27
2.3.1	Smoking and Personality Structure	27
2.3.2	Factor Analytical Studies of Smoker Motivation	29

	Appendix: Problems of Defining the Term "Smoker Motivation"	32
2.3.3	The Psychoanalytical Approach	33
2.3.4	Smoking as Explained by Classical Learning Theory	34
2.3.5	The Social-Psychological Approach	36
2.4	The Sociological Approach	38
2.4.1	The Influence of Social Norms	40
2.4.2	The Influence of the Social Support System of Smoking	41
2.5	Summary	42
	Notes	45
Chapter 3
	The Typical Smoking Career: The Development of Smoking Behaviour from a Biographical Viewpoint	67
3.1	Initiation Phase	67
3.2	Habituation	69
3.3	Cessation Phase	70
3.4	Oscillation – Another Smoking Career?	72
3.5	Summary	73
	Notes	74
Chapter 4
	The Psychosocial Benefits and the Health Risks of Smoking	77
4.1	Current Opinions – Smoking as a Health Risk	77
4.2	Discounting – Strategies to Minimize Risk	80
	Appendix: Smoking, the Reduction of Cognitive Dissonance and Stigma Management	82
4.3	The Psychosocial Benefits of Smoking	84
4.3.1	Affect Management	85
4.3.2	Presentation of Identity	86
4.3.3	Regulation of Social Interaction	88
4.3.4	Ritual	89
4.3.5	Résumé: The Cost/Benefit Balance of the Smoker	90
4.4	The Cost/Benefit Balance as Considered by Smokers – and the Difficulties Confronting Social Scientists in Trying to Verify This Phenomenon	91
	Notes	92

Chapter 5

Summary	103
--------------------------	-----

Chapter 6

Perspectives for Future Research into Smoker Motivation	109
--	-----

6.1 Outline of a Multidimensional Theoretical Model to Explain Smoking Behaviour	109
--	-----

6.2 Basic Elements of the Prospective Research Project on Smoker Motivation	115
---	-----

6.2.1 Questions To Be Answered by the Prospective Survey	115
--	-----

6.2.2 Design of the Prospective Research Study	117
--	-----

6.2.3 What We Can Expect from the Prospective Research Study	118
--	-----

References	121
-----------------------------	-----