

CONTENTS

I	A summary of the argument	1
II	Attitude as the meaning of expressive behavior	3
III	Attitude-relevant behavior and the 'three-component' view	10
IV	Learning theory and the acquisition of attitudinal responses	18
V	The relativity of consistency	27
VI	The learning of accountability	35
VII	Values, salience and accountability	42
VIII	Attitude and the psychology of judgment	49
IX	Judgment and learning	57
X	Shared attitudes and social representations	66
XI	Accountability, judgment and consistency	71
XII	Attitudes as a social product	76
	References	79