

Contents

Preface by Georg Stauth	i
Preface and Acknowledgement	v
Introduction: Visions, Claims and Utopias	1
Morality and Politics in Southern Thailand	2
State of the Art	3
Communal Space	4
Visions, Claims and Utopias	6
Previous Studies on the Middle Classes in Southeast Asia	8
Religious Self-Affirmation in Southern Thailand	10
Outline of Chapters	11
Border Stories 1
Chapter 1 Locals and Cosmopolitans in Southern Thailand	15
At the Religious Crossroads	16
Buddhism in Thailand	16
Islam and the Malay World	18
Modernity and Religious Resurgence	20
The Sacred Landscape: Historiography of South Thailand	22
Family and State: Chinese Immigrants in Southern Siam	22
Stories from the Border	24
Entering the Scenery	25
Sketching the Landscape: Some Illustrative Vignettes	28
Somkiat	29

Ismail	31
Punrit	32
Kruathep	33
Cosmopolitans and Locals	35
Extending Networks	39

Chapter 2 The Making of Consumers

in Southern Thailand	41
The Stuff of Middle Classness	41
Nongyaw and Sompong: The Family is one of Nature's Masterpieces	42
Varunee and Boonchu: The Family as a Castle	44
Somjai and Narongrit: Managing a Family	47
Sida and Sarunee: The Islamic Family	48
Juggling Home and Work	49
Moral Panics	50
Practices of Consumption: Housing	52
Changing Meaning of Childhood	54
Making up Domesticity: Emancipation and Subordination	56
Consumption: Life-Spaces of Self-Definition	56
Nongyaw and Sompong: Thai Love Thailand	56
Varunee and Boonchu: Success and Ethics	57
Sida and Sarunee: Following the Word of the Prophet	57
What are Collective Identities for?	58
Consuming Thainess, Contesting Thainess	58

Border Stories 2

Chapter 3 Self-Affirmation, Globalization and Cultural Distinction in Songkla and Patani

Klum 'Rao Rak Songkla'	61
------------------------------	----

Practices and Activities	62
Intellectual Figures and Locations.	66
Concluding Remarks	68
Local Muslim Society in Patani	69
Che Man's Vision of the Local Islamic Community in Patani	71
New Styles and International Exchanges	74
Personalities, Networks and Locations	76
Communicating Islam in the Public Sphere	81
Leading Voices of Public Islam.	83
Concluding Remarks	85
Chapter 4 Community Media and the Politics of Nostalgia	87
Making Waves: Core Radio and other Media in the People Love Songkla Campaign	91
Islamic Media in the Patani Islamic Resurgence.	93
Community Media and Media Spaces Compared.	95
The Rise of Mediated Publicness in Southern Thailand	97
Social Memory and the Politics of Authenticity	98
The Politics of Remembrance	99
The Politics of Remembering and Forgetting.	100
Social Memory	101
Theatres of Memory	103
The Curse, the Blessing and the Oath.	108
The Past Cannot Be Forgotten	109
The Production of Locality and the Thai State	110
Southern Thailand as a Discursive Construct.	112

Border Stories 3

Chapter 5 Morals Matter: Cultural Politics Compared.	113
Tradition, Modernity and Globalization	115

Cultural Politics Compared	116
Public Religion: Religious Public Spheres Compared	119
Public Transcripts	122
Modes of Social Organization and Leadership	125
Leading Professionals in Songkla, Religious Authorities in Patani	128
The Newcomer: Patterns of Mobilization and Discipline	129
Culture Building and the Politics of Expressive Identities	131
Life Orders in Southern Thailand	132
Family Constructions and Gender Orders	133
Conclusion: Debating Morality and the Nation in Southern Thailand	137
After the Nation-State?	138
Debating Morality	139
Political Careers in Songkla	141
Cultural Bonds Between Patani and the Middle East	145
Transformation of Locality in Southern Thailand: Visions, Claims and Utopias	147
Locality, the Public Sphere and the Making of Moral Space	149
Debating Morality in Southern Thailand	151
Notes	153
Bibliography	161