Table of Contents

Introduction

Christa Knellwolf King and Margarete Rubik

Formulae for Imperial Story Telling: The Formation and Dissemination of Imperial Values in Victorian Narratives

Vera Nünning

“The spoiled adopted child of Great Britain and even of the Empire”: A Symptomatic Reading of Heart of Darkness

John Storey

“A Question of Literature”: The Romantic Writer and Modern Wars of Empire

Neil Ramsey

Reverse Imperialism: Invasion Narratives in English Turn-of-the-Century Fiction

Michael C. Frank

Metaphors as Mini-Stories of Empire: On the Dissemination of Imperialist Mentalities and Values through Metaphors

Ansgar Nünning

Making Babies in the South Seas: Captain Cook’s Problematic Properties

Jonathan Lamb

Adventurer, Western Observer and Female Scientist: The Conflicting Interests of Ida Pfeiffer’s Travelogues

Margarete Rubik
The Novara Expedition and the Imperialist Messages of Exploration Literature

Christa Knellwolf King

Ancient Historiography as Imperial Narrative: The Case of Macedonia and the Second British Empire

C. Akça Ataç

Strategies of Subversion in the Work of Lessing, Achebe, and Ngugi

Linda Lang-Peralta

“[A] good disaster”: John Franklin as Imperial (Anti-)Hero in Rudy Wiebe’s A Discovery of Strangers (1994), Mordecai Richler’s Solomon Gursky Was Here (1989) and Sten Nadolny’s Die Entdeckung der Langsamkeit (1983)

Martin Löschnigg

Magic Realism and the Illegitimate Empire

Ursula Kluwick

Notes on Contributors

Index