

Contents

Introduction	1
CHAPTER 1
The cultural context of the Kaurismäkis: Finnish films for Finnish people?	13
PART 1
Developing post-national forms of cinema, 1981–1985	29
CHAPTER 2
Displaced souls lost in Finland: the Kaurismäkis' films as the cinema of the marginalised	31
CHAPTER 3
Between convergence and divergence: the transvergent cinemas of Aki and Mika Kaurismäki	71
PART 2
Life in a capitalist welfare state: marginal hope and dystopian prophecies	101
CHAPTER 4
Socio-economic exclusion and the fragmented individual: Aki Kaurismäki's 'proletarian trilogy' and Hamlet Liikemaaailmassa	103
CHAPTER 5
Mika Kaurismäki's 'life-politics trilogy': post-nationalism between the welfare state and global capitalism	129

PART 3
The international adventures of the Kaurismäkis	147
CHAPTER 6
The search for post-national stability: Mika Kaurismäki's international films, 1987–1990	149
CHAPTER 7
The problems of post-national integration: Aki Kaurismäki's international films, 1989–1992	171
PART 4
Transnational travel and the difficulty of 'home': projecting the post-national condition for an EU-integrated Finland	201
CHAPTER 8
A return to home? Aki Kaurismäki's Leningrad Cowboys Meet Moses , Total Balalaika Show and Pidä Huivistasi Kiinni Tatjana	203
CHAPTER 9
A farewell to Finland: Mika Kaurismäki's The Last Border and Tigrero	225
Conclusion: Rethinking the cultural nation	253
Bibliography	263
Filmography	279
Index	285